Trieste Rally Grows

Thousands Go To Hear Tito

TRIESTE (AP)—Yugoslavs in the thousands, by flag-bedecked buses and trains, were pouring into the tiny village of Okrajaglica Saturday night to hear President Tito make his much-heralded declaration on the flaming Trieste issue.

The Yugoslav president speaks Sunday on the dispute with Italy over the future of this free territory which both nations claim. His foreign ministry has peppered Rome all week with diplomatic protests against armed demonstrations along the frontier, and has threatened reprisals.

In contrast to the sizzling notes, there was an upward display of order Saturday night on both sides of the frontier, which splits the town of Gorizia, five miles west of Okrajaglica and 25 miles north of Trieste itself. Here Tito has set the scene for his oration.

On the Yugoslav side there was almost a festive air as the tide of travelers poured through Gorizia railway junction from north and south. The flow of special trains and buses was expected to continue all night.

On the Italian side there appeared to be little excitement and no great evidence of popular concern, despite a week of diplomatic bickering between the two countries.

MOVEMENT CHARGED

Yugoslavia has charged that Italy rushed three divisions to the border area last week end as a show of force under a pretense of fear that Yugoslavia intended to annex her occupation zone of Trieste.

Zone B is occupied by 5,000 Yugoslav troops under the 1947 Italian peace treaty. Zone A is occupied by British and American forces.

Carabinieri and police along the Italian side of Gorizia seemed to have been reinforced to assure order but there were no soldiers in evidence.

Yugoslavia, in her fourth diplomatic note in three days, Friday, threatened to march troops to the frontier unless Italy withdrew her forces from border areas.

Canada Negotiating For Housing Abroad

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—Negotiations are under way between Canada and the governments of both Germany and France for construction of married quarters for Canadian army and air force personnel stationed in Europe. The project is linked with the defense department policy of allowing men who agree to serve for two years or longer to move their families across at government expense.

B.C.'s Biggest Refinery

British Columbia will have the largest and most modern refinery in the Pacific Northwest when Imperial Oil Company's loco plant is opened officially September 16. The plant has been re-equipped with new units, including B.C.'s first fluid "cat cracker."

Above are the twin towers of the atmospheric and vacuum distillation unit, first piece of equipment through which the crude oil, to be supplied from Alberta by Trans Mountain pipeline, passes on its journey through the refinery.

Exchange Report Challenged by UN

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Communists returned 111 U.S.

prisoners Sunday on the final day of exchanges and said all Allied repatriates willing to go home had been sent back.

The statement was immediately challenged by a UN command spokesman who said a preliminary check did not show that jet ace Capt. Harold Fischer, Jr., had been returned.

Captain Fischer failed to return from a flight April 7 on his 70th Sabre jet mission. Two days later Peiping radio said the young pilot was captured after he had been shot down in a dogfight over Manchuria.

The UN command spokesman said 111 Americans were returned Sunday, although the Communists had promised only 110.

The exchange involved 88,000 Communist and Allied prisoners. Among the last 111 Americans released were a handful of the Reds alleged to have "confessed" to germ warfare. The U.S. state department had long since denounced the "confessions" as obtained by torture.

Also returned without previous announcement were the crew members of a B-29 Superfort who had been interned in Red China.

It is hoped that the arrangements, which may be concluded before the end of the month, will provide that the quarters will be constructed by the French and Germans under Canadian supervision.

Construction is likely to be financed as part of the NATO agreement or, in the case of Germany, out of reparations. A stipulation concerning the movement of Canadian families to Europe is that the men must be able to find suitable accommodation.

In several areas where the Canadians are to be stationed, however, such as Soest in Germany, this is virtually impossible.

The same difficulty would face the families of air force men stationed at Zweibruck and Baden-Soellingen in Germany and Gros Tequelin in France. At some of these stations, families are now living in rented trailers brought over from England.

Dane on Trial for Murder

Crime Laid to Hypnosis

COPENHAGEN (NANA)—A Danish bank robber, who, together with an associate, broke into a bank in Copenhagen and shot to death two employees, must have acted under hypnosis. This conclusion has been submitted to the court which is trying the murderer, Palle Hardup, by a physician, Dr. P. Reiter.

Dr. Reiter, who is a hypnotism expert, after a long observation of Hardup, said he was convinced that the man had acted under the impact of hypnotism by a fellow-criminal, Bjorn Nielsen, during their armed attack on the bank.

Reiter's conclusions are con-

Lenient British Navy Orders Deserter Freed

Hopes Bright for Hughes To Make Home in Canada

VANCOUVER (CP)—The big gamble has paid off and Ivor Hughes, 35, of Dolgelly, Wales, wartime deserter from the Royal Navy, is a free man.

He was released Saturday from HMCS Discovery, on orders from the navy he deserted at Capetown in 1941.

A swift interview with immigration officials followed—he is in Canada illegally—and he was turned loose.

Hughes must report back to immigration September 16; but an official source who asked that he not be named said: "It looks as if he is going to be allowed to stay."

It took just a week to wind up the story which began 12 years ago when Signalman Ivor Hughes deserted in South Africa.

He "ceased to exist" in 1941 when a "Pie, Alan Medd" enlisted with a South African army unit and fought with that unit through North Africa and Italy.

It was as Alan Medd—the name of a schoolboy friend—that he was discharged in 1946 and worked for two years in the gold fields and copper mines of Africa.

And it was again Alan Medd who sailed from Capetown in 1948 for Montreal, where he jumped ship and again enlisted. "Pie, Alan Medd" again went to war, this time with the Royal Canadian Regiment in Korea. He was discharged last May in Vancouver.

He worked on the aluminum project at Kemano, B.C., until last Sunday. Then Alan Medd came back to Vancouver and took up the name Ivor Hughes once more.

He assumed his rightful name by giving himself up to police as "Ivor Hughes, deserter." The crime carries a maximum penalty of death, but Hughes said: "All I want is my own name back."

It was learned Saturday that the Royal Navy, which ordered his immediate release after scanning his records, would issue him a "protective certificate" to show that his name had been cleared.

Theft Blamed On Juveniles

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—Police believe juveniles were responsible for breaking into the Black Ball Ferries office at Horseshoe Bay Friday night and stealing six cash boxes containing $1,500.

The thieves did not attempt to enter a safe beside the cash boxes.

Hurricane Brushes Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UP)—Gales and mountainous seas buffeted Bermuda Saturday night, but it appeared the island would be spared the fury of Hurricane Carol's 110-mile-an-hour winds.

Forecasters predicted the fringe of the tropical storm would sideswipe the island, bringing only moderately high winds.

They said the hurricane's "eye" would pass to westward.

The Atlantic storm, third and worst of the season, was moving north-northwest at 15 to 16 miles an hour. However, it was expected to begin a slow curve to the northeast Sunday taking it away from the North American mainland.

The 40,000-odd residents and tourists here had taken all precautions after forecasters warned earlier that full hurricane force winds of up to 90 miles an hour might strike Bermuda.

Gales were piling up 20-foot breakers on the island's reef-ringed southern shore, filling the air with salt spray.

Take Care on Tuesday

This sign means just what it says, and Tuesday as thousands of children hustle to and from the first day of school such signs will require attention from motorists. Still in existence in some parts of the district are 15-mile-an-hour signs for school zones.

West Germans Voting Today

BONN, Germany (AP)—Europe's most crucial election campaign since the Second World War ended Saturday night, leaving West German voters to decide Sunday whether they rearm with the West or seek neutrality in the cold war.

The 33,000,000-strong electorate will give its answer in voting for a new 484-member Bundestag, parliament's lower house.

West Germany is the big prize in the East-West struggle and the United States and Russia have openly intervened in the bitter campaign.

In a virtually unprecedented move in recent American diplomacy, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles gave a forthright endorsement to stern old Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, Christian Democratic leader, who has headed a middle-road pro-Western government for the past four years.

His Socialist foes immediately dubbed Adenauer an American puppet and hoped that Dulles' endorsement would prove a political "kiss of death."

Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov, determined to wreck Adenauer's program of German cooperation with the United States and West Europe, called for the chancellor's defeat.

Adenauer's main opposition is the strong Socialist party, which wants to block any German alliance with the West and pursue an independent German policy in the cold war.

Like Adenauer, the Socialists are staunchly anti-Communist but they have placed the lure of a united Germany without rearmament before the war-weary German people.

Eisenhower Annoyance Discounted

DENVER (UP)—The White House appears to be trying to discourage speculation that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has incurred President Eisenhower's displeasure by recent statements about the German election, Trieste and India.

Dulles will fly to Denver late Sunday to confer with the President.

Murray Snyder, assistant White House press secretary, termed "completely untrue" a published report that Mr. Eisenhower was "gravely concerned" about Dulles' statements earlier this week concerning the German voting and Trieste.

Snyder said that Dulles arranged the meeting with the president before his controversial remarks were made.

Labor Day Holiday Taking Early Toll

By The Canadian Press

The Labor Day week end, summer's last holiday, has already claimed at least 10 lives across Canada.

A list of fatalities compiled by The Canadian Press showed seven persons died in traffic accidents on the first day of the holiday week end, two more died from drowning and one man died in a cave-in.

Heavy as the first-day toll was in Canada, it was still far under the staggering total of at least 138 lives claimed by violent accidents in the United States. The U.S. total was made up of 101 deaths due to traffic mishaps, 18 drownings and 19 miscellaneous accidental causes.

In Canada Quebec heads the list so far with five traffic deaths, followed by New Brunswick where two persons lost their lives in highway accidents.

Two little boys were drowned in Alberta and a Northern Ontario miner was killed in a mine cave-in.

No fatalities were reported in B.C. as the rush of holidaygoers got under way for a final fling at resorts.

Labor Plans Parade

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver unionists are staging their biggest Labor Day demonstration in a decade Monday and in the thick of it will be "Mr. Labor" himself, the oldest active officer of a trade union on the continent.

He is John William Bruce, OBE, and his age, to use his own words, is "a young 78."

He's been a union member since 1893—he's got his original membership card to prove it—and an international representative of the AFL Plumbers and Pipefitters' Union since 1910.

Bruce is here from Toronto to help shipyard workers negotiate a new wage contract, and he says he will take time to march in the big parade of unions to the PNE Monday.

More than 1,000 men and women from unions in the Greater Vancouver area will parade to the PNE open-air theatre, where B.C. labor leaders and government labor officials will speak at a brief ceremony.

Officials at Guided Missile Centre in Australia Courteous but Cautious

ADELAIDE, South Australia (Reuters)—They are courteous but cautious at Salisbury, 15 miles north of here, where guided missiles are made.

Actually, there are two Salisburys.

First, there is the village, where all may come and go as they please without hindrance.

Then, three miles away, is "the establishment" where none may go without observing all the niceties of official obstruction, courteously applied.

At "the establishment," the cream of available scientists from Britain and Australia, aviation experts and researchers, and the most highly skilled technicians and artisans, join forces to perfect the long-range weapons which Britain and Australia make and test jointly.

And one thing here that the controlling authorities appear to pride themselves upon is the smoothness of their handling of visiting laymen.

Entry to "the establishment" is guarded. The caller states the name of the person he wishes to see and the nature of his business. If his visit is proved legitimate, the caller is escorted to where he is to go and, after the business is transacted, he is escorted out.

But scientists and department heads at "the establishment" do not make statements for outside consumption.

They are concerned with their electronic apparatus, cathode ray screens with their weird patterns of motion, intricate drafting, administrators and general staff.

Almost every week, British scientists and technicians arrive at Salisbury and at Woomera, 300 miles away in the desert.

One thing apparent to all who go to "the establishment" is the airport now being built at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

No one has said so but it just could be that Britain's atomic bomb or bombs for testing somewhere within the 80,000 square miles of prohibited Woomera area next October have already been landed there.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM A. HILLS

In Canada, religious communities have come to look upon the Sunday preceding Labor Day as a kind of unofficial holy day dedicated to the working man. In this observance, they are blessed by the spirit of Christ.

Jesus, who was known to his contemporaries as "the carpenter."

But Labor Sunday also gives the Church an opportunity to think about her relationship to the world of industry. This is a world which, to a churchman, is full of complex currents and delicately balanced antipathies.

Consequently, impulsive and unreflective action on the part of any Christian body or any of its members, vis-a-vis labor, is at once futile and not a little dangerous.

One of the greatest Archbishops of Canterbury was the late Dr. William Temple. He was respected beyond the borders of his own communion for his intellectual stature and his philosophic insight. His sympathy towards the economic and social problems faced by the modern worker was open and unshamed.

He it was who chided a somewhat hasty pronouncement of a minor church committee on social affairs with the pungent remark: "It is half-baked reflection which is most perilous."

Alas! We have been guilty of it.

Labor Day is something more than a holiday for, as a day dedicated to labor and industry, it reminds us of the fact that the opportunity, the ability, and the desire to work is a trilogy of heavenly benediction.

The observance of this day gives labor its rightful place in the economy of money and machines. It proclaims the dignity and the importance of labor in the national life of Canada.

But let us ask an important question. Where does that great body of ordinary men and women, grouped beneath the banner of labor, stand with respect to the religious life of this Dominion?

We are all aware of the hostility of atheistic communism to the Christian way of life. We are also cognizant of the fact that in classical socialism there is an anti-clerical bias.

Have these tensions been carried over into the modern labor organization? If they have, what proportion of blame lies at the door of the church or the labor temple?

I feel, personally, that the democratization of life which has gone on for the past 50 years has made such tensions as anachronistic as a dinosaur. What is needed is good faith, and sympathy on both sides. And perhaps, above all else, a dictionary so that words are given their right meaning.

If Christianity is to have any meaning and significance for our world, it must be made relevant to every department of life.

Sometimes we are told that Jesus was entirely concerned with the spiritual condition of men and that, consequently, His Church is plunging beyond its depth when it interests itself in the mundane affairs of the world.

I cannot accept that doctrine. It is true that Christ did place primary importance upon the spirit, but I cannot believe that the Son of God who went about healing the sick and feeding the 5,000 denied the material claims of man.

The objects of labor and the Church are the same. Each wants a better world. Although their methods of attaining that world may appear to be different, it is not about time that, under the one Eternal Father, they joined their hands in fraternal association to bring this about. Each could do the other a lot of good.

Geraniums Keep Through Winter

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS
Questions and Answers

Geraniums in Winter. DMH, Victoria.—If you have only a few geraniums in the garden, they may be potted up, cut back hard, window ledge, keeping the soil a little on the dry side.

If you have too many plants to treat them as house plants, dig them up about the end of October and plant them close together in boxes of soil, cutting the plants back to four-inch stubs. The boxes may be kept in a frost-free basement through the winter. The soil should be not quite dust dry, but almost.

Cuttings are best taken in early September, although the geranium slips root quite easily any time of the year. Select young, short-jointed growths from three to five inches long, and insert them around the edge of a flower pot filled with very sandy soil.

LARGER POTS
When well rooted, pot them up into three-inch pots singly, using a mixture of two parts matted from the anemones, and loam to one part coarse sand, with a little leaf mold or other conditions are ideal shredded cow manure added, for a serious build-up of this disease.

Fungus or Toadstool. J.S.D., Esquimalt.—I wouldn't like to take the responsibility of saying, from your description, whether the fungi on your lawn are edible or poisonous. Your widow might sue me.

Dear flies: We always wish to live amicably with all creatures in the world. It is therefore regretted that you do nothing but harm to mankind and that we must, in consequence, exterminate you. Pray have no rancor against us for killing you, but accept, in manly resignation, the inevitable consequence of being born flies.

Belgrade (Reuters).—Two Yugoslavs were sentenced Saturday to death at Laskovac in Serbia for spying for Bulgaria. The prosecution alleged Milan Nedimovic and Obren Ratkovic were spies and "diversionists" who had several times crossed into Yugoslavia from Bulgaria to gather military, political and economic information.

TOKYO (NANA).—In Hiroshima one time camp of the British Commonwealth occupation forces in Japan—a Buddhist memorial service has been held for "the repose of the souls of 2,000,000 departed flies." The flies were killed in a recent sanitation drive to make Hiroshima "the town without a fly."

North B.C. Spruce Grouse Looks Like Franklin Species

BY C. J. GUIGUET

Provincial Museum Biologist

The spruce grouse, more often called spruce partridge, is a forest dwelling bird confined, in British Columbia to the extreme northern part of the province. An eastern race occupies the Peace River parkland area and a western form occurs in the northwest from Atlin Lake south to Telegraph Creek. There are no apparent field differences in these races, but the spruce grouse is likely to be confused with the Franklin grouse which occurs from the southern boreal forest areas, through the sub-alpine and Columbia forest regions south, at higher altitudes into northern Oregon.

SMALL GROUSE

The spruce partridge is a small grouse measuring about 15 inches long. The male plumage is predominantly black and grey, broken on the flanks by white markings. The tip of the tail in this species carries a rusty, ochreous band, and the upper tail coverts are usually without white tips, although this character is sometimes found in the northwestern birds.

The spruce partridge, however, never has white at the tip of the tail, and this feature is the main criterion in separating the species under discussion from the more widely dispersed and better known Franklin grouse. The tail of the Franklin grouse is usually jet black to the tips, and the upper tail coverts terminate in a broad white band.

Females of both species are irregularly barred in browns, greys and black and are more difficult to separate than are the males. However, what has been said of the former's tail applies to the hens as well, though sometimes the differences are not so apparent.

Spruce grouse nest on the ground, usually under a low branch of spruce or bracken. The nest is generally a slight depression in the moss lined with dead leaves and grass.

The hen lays from 10 to 16 beautifully marked eggs, said to be the most beautiful laid by the grouse family. They have a pinkish or buffy ground color and are strongly marked with spots and blotches of rich russet brown.

The young are precocial, running with the mother almost as soon as they dry off after hatching. At this time they eat many insects, but the older birds live largely upon the buds and needles of spruce, augmenting that diet in the summer with whatever berries may occur.

COURTSHIP DISPLAY

The courtship display of the male spruce partridge is elaborate and very similar to that of Franklin grouse, which will be illustrated and described next week. In the meantime local bird watchers need worry little over misidentification, for neither of these species occurs on Vancouver Island, and any small dark spruce-inhabiting grouse seen at these latitudes must be the Franklin grouse.

On stage will be Jack Droy and Daphne Goldrick, both in "Night Must Fall," Murial Onton, Kitty Dutcher, and playing opposite Norma Macmillan in the lead role, Thor Argim as the bewildered young man.

This nonsensical story should be good entertainment for the whole family.

Maurice Corbett, whom Victoria theatregoers will remember as a member of the York cast, said Friday he has sold another play to an American publishing house.

Titled "Lucky Dollars," it is a three-act comedy about a man who wins a sweepstake and takes on a bet that he can keep the news quiet for a whole year.

BOUGHT BY COMPANY

Mr. Corbett said the Row Peterson Plays Limited in Evanston, Illinois, made the purchase.

One of Maurice Corbett's plays, "A Lady Called X," appeared on the York stage last spring.

Victoria baritone John Dunbar will sing a special program on Tuesday afternoon from 2:15 to 2:30. The CBC has announced.

When the Shakespearean Festival at Stratford closed in August, the cast presented Montreal actress Eleanor Stuart with the gown she wore as the Countess Rousillon in "All's Well That Ends Well."

The veteran actress, who has played many leading roles in English and American theatrical productions, was given the gown as a mark of appreciation for the help she gave next members in voice and dramatic training.

The Ford Theatre comes back to the air on the Dominion Network of the CBC on October 2. The hour-long program has won many awards for the fine quality of show and cast it has produced and has given many young Canadian actors their first chance at professional work.

Canadian playwrights have also fared well with this program and the practice of using all Canadian material will continue as far as possible, CBC officials have announced.

More than 1,600 youngsters from Canada and the United States attended the eight-week course at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Michigan, this summer.

Most of them took part in some phase of the camp's six orchestras, three bands and many ensemble and choral groups.

He took the job two years ago as one of six assistant chiefs of staff. Since then, he's risen further and faster than any other high-ranking NATO officer.

KNOWS PROBLEMS
His grasp of NATO's all-important integration problem was illustrated at the conference on logistics he called early in the game. High staff officers from the nations concerned had barely settled in their chairs when Plant told them abruptly that the time had come to consider "whether we are going to have a truly Allied air force or six little ones with all the separate logistics complications that implies."

When Norstad reorganized AAFCE, he made Plant one of his three deputies, impressed by his drive and potential. New emphasis was laid on the importance of the logistics department.

Totem Players' 'Jane Steps Out' Tale of High-Stepping Man Hunt

BY MAURY GWYNNE

A high-stepping manhunter will bring smiles and chuckles to Totem Theatre audiences this week in the fast-moving comedy, "Jane Steps Out."

Right on the tail of the mystery thriller, "Night Must Fall," this week's production is a madcap story about an innocent young thing who sets out to steal her sister's fiancé.

ENGLISH AUTHOR
Written by the English playwright, Kenneth Horne, "Jane Steps Out" has been called one of the fastest-paced comedies ever written.

Jane, played by Norma Macmillan is a gay assortment of ugly duckling, vamp, woman of the world and anything else she can connect to win the admiration of her sister's man.

The man in question finds Jane a deeper problem than the Egyptian tombs where he spends his time in exploration.

To round out the farcical cast in this hilarious story, Jane's mother is a golf-loving extrovert, her father a blustery former army officer and her grandmother a pipe-smoking old schemer who plots Jane's campaign against her sister.

Playing a guest role is Mildred Franklin who portrays a frightfully posh, monocle-wearing young lady with very set ideas.

On stage will be Jack Droy and Daphne Goldrick, both in "Night Must Fall," Murial Onton, Kitty Dutcher, and playing opposite Norma Macmillan in the lead role, Thor Argim as the bewildered young man.

Show It, Mr. Mowat

... It's the poor man's "Butcher"

Hello, September, & how are you? Just what's to come, I haven't a clue; But so far Sept., you're doing fine.

Your sun & stars continue to shine. To make my dahlias bulge such a size, I'm sure, if I could, I'd win first prize.

They're out on the street by the garden gate. They're bigger by far than a large dinner plate. I listen to people make odd whistling sounds.

"I'll bet," said one, "that weighs 25 pounds."

"Just LOOK at this thing!" said a passer-by. To hold up its head it surely did try.

It seems such a shame, it has to be dropped. There's a horticulturist here, & he's sure got a scoop.

They can't hardly see me, as I laze in my chair. "Great Heavens!" exclaimed an elderly pair.

"What's he put in the soil, MUST be fishy!" "What a gorgeous color," another one cried.

This ruse, too, with a hauser he's tied up. But a hauser my friends is not strong enuff.

So come, drive by, and see my stuff. Bring me some chains, or cable of wire.

But hurry up, before they all tire. I'll saw you off one, before they are thru.

And I'll throw in some earwigs, A BUSHEL OR TWO.

Now, through the use of the Audiometer, a Paravox hearing aid can be made up by Photo-Script to suit the requirements of the hard-of-hearing person as ascertained by Audiometric Tests.

You are invited to take advantage of this Photo-Script Service there is no extra charge for it. Just call at the Victoria Hearing Aid Co., 325 Yarrow Building, 625 Fort Street, any day except Saturday afternoon or Sunday. ## Gaglardi Scornful Of $200,000 Offer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Works Minister P. A. Gaglardi Saturday turned down Vancouver's offer of $200,000 toward a new Marpole Bridge.

Boat Ready Below

VANCOUVER (CP)—There's a fellow plying the waters of the False Creek channel in a 12-foot rowboat eight hours a day with no place in particular to go.

However, there is a purpose. In Pat Heron's toll his job is to fish from the creek any workman who is unlucky enough to fall from the new Granville bridge. The bridge will connect the downtown business area with southern residential districts.

So far he hasn't had to rescue any workmen, but he has retrieved a number of aluminum bats.

The 39-year-old Irishman is engaged in his unusual job with Dominion Bridge Company in compliance with workmen's compensation board and union safety regulations regarding construction over water.

Pat's job isn't as soft as it might seem. He has to keep a close watch on the bridge for falling objects, since even a rivet, weighing more than a pound, could scuttle him promptly.

The bridge began last March, is 60 per cent completed.

He said he had expected "something like $200,000." The offer was made Friday by Mayor Fred Hume, who told Mr. Gaglardi he was placing a $200,000 bylaw before the public in December as Vancouver's share in "the cost of a bridge to replace the Marpole Bridge."

It was the latest move in the three-way battle to replace the swing-span structure over the Fraser River on the main route to Sea Island Airport.

The structure is laughingly reputed to open whenever a fat salmon swims up the Fraser to spawn, gained national prominence when it delayed Prime Minister St. Laurent and his party during their tour here.

Mr. Gaglardi, who earlier met a four-man delegation from Vancouver council, Saturday had a one-word answer to Mayor Hume's offer: "Peanuts."

Mr. Gaglardi said a new bridge would cost $10,000,000 and that Vancouver's share would be more like $2,000,000—depending on how big a bite he can put on the federal government.

The status remained quo Saturday, and Ald. Jack Connors summed up the situation with "Peanuts? I guess it is. But the city can't afford to feed Victoria on caviar."

MORRIS, Ill. (AP)—A 13-year-old wife has given birth in the Morris hospital to an eight-pound, four-ounce boy. Mrs. Diane Barr, who will be 14 years old Monday, gave birth to the baby Tuesday. Both she and the boy are doing fine, the hospital reported Saturday.

U.S. Air Force Ace Wins Race for Bendix Trophy

DAYTON, O. (UP)—Major William T. Whisner, Jr., an air force ace in two wars, won the 1,900-mile Bendix Trophy Race in record time Saturday, beating his closest rival by seconds.

Whisner, 29, a veteran of 11 years in the air force, flew his P-51 Mustang jet from Murco Field, Calif., to Dayton in three hours, five minutes and 45 seconds.

A crowd of 50,000 on hand for the National Air Races let out a collective "oh" when Whisner crossed the finish line to break the record of three hours, 27 minutes set in 1951 by Capt. James S. Carson.

Playing Tricks with Gravity

Gravity seems to have disobeyed its own law here, as three youths stick to a wall and wriggle all over it without touching a floor. The law of gravity is still in effect, even here, however, as the youths are spinning around in a drum, one of the attractions at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. The spinning drum allows those inside to act like flies on a wall. (Central Press Canadian.)

Heat Far Better Than Cold, Sweltering Delegates Hear

MONTREAL (CP)—Delegates to the 19th International Physiological Congress, sweating out one of the hottest weeks in Montreal's history, were told Friday that it's better to be hot than cold.

Prof. E. F. DuBois of Cornell medical college, Ithaca, N.Y., said experiments show man adapts himself better to heat than to cold.

Speaking at a symposium on the physiology of cold, Professor DuBois said humans in temperate and tropical countries are blessed by their ability to get rid of large amounts of heat by sweating.

But sweating in the Arctic, where water freezes quickly, is a different matter. There it is a menace rather than an aid.

'Invaders' from East Germany Get Free Ride

These "invaders" from East Germany are shown about to enter a police van in Frankfurt after they were rounded up as suspected agitators who came across the line into the West to stir up some trouble in the West German elections. About 4,000 such "invaders" have been arrested within the last few days. Most of them have been shipped back to East Germany. (Central Press Canadian.)

Senate Probes Charge

WASHINGTON (UP)—A Senate investigation was ordered Saturday of charges of gross mismanagement and possible fraud in the government's $5,000,000 program for stockpiling strategic materials.

Chairman Styles Bridges of the appropriations committee, ordered his staff to make a preliminary check of the allegations and said:

"If this is a fact, responsible persons certainly must be sought out and held accountable."

The New Hampshire Republican directed Paul E. Kammerick, chief of the committee's investigations division, to "secure preliminary information" so the committee can determine whether a full scale inquiry is needed.

The official result gave Whisner's average speed as 603.47 miles an hour. Johnson's was 603.287, and his time was three hours, five minutes and 49.8 seconds.

All 10 air force planes entered in the race eclipsed the old record.

India exported 1,360,000 tons of manganese ore in 1951-52.

Balloon-Built House Planned in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—The "balloon house" developed in the United States is about to come to Canada.

Eugene Buyan, who will live in it, has to get rid of a conventional four-walled place in San Francisco first. At 43, he is vice-president of a construction company which has been going round the world blowing up oversized balloons, spraying concrete over them, deflating them and leaving the solid shell standing ready for a family to move in.

"We won't do actual construction. We will just provide the forms, equipment and know-how," said Mr. Buyan.

"It's not suitable for city houses where everyone wants individuality, but for rural areas, oil fields, boom towns or any place where mass-produced shelter is needed, it's ideal."

He said he would aim at building grain storage facilities, warehouses, industrial and commercial buildings wherever needed.

In his home to be built here next spring, balloon plastic forms will be used for 1,000 feet of living room, dining room and kitchen. The other 4,000 feet of house will be of conventional construction.

London or Her Children Choice for War Bride

Peak Scaled Despite Alpine Eagle WALTOUNNANCHE, Italy (AP)—Despite protests of an Alpine eagle, three mountain climbers—one a priest—conquered the previously unscalped southeast face of the Matterhorn, Friday.

News of their exploit reached this city Saturday.

The peak, several hundred feet from the 14,692-foot-high tip of the Matterhorn, was named "Little Italy Muzio" in honor of Italo Muzio of Genoa, one of the climbers. He was accompanied by Rev. Luigi Maquignaz, also of Genoa, and Louis Cagrel, a Valtournanche guide.

Near the summit, the three were attacked by an eagle, but frightened it away.

Youngster Pulls 'Handy' Carrot A Victoria boy put down his hand to pull out a carrot and pulled up a carrot that looked like his hand—only without a thumb.

It was pulled from the ground in the garden of H. W. Bigsby, 1827 Chestnut, by young James, a grandson.

Cabinet Returning To Work

OTTAWA (CP)—Holidaying cabinet ministers began returning to the capital this week end to tackle back work and to attend a cabinet meeting which may produce several important announcements.

The cabinet session, second since the Liberals' August 10 election sweep, will be held next Wednesday.

Most of the returning cabinet ministers have been away from Ottawa since the week end of August 15. Revenue Minister McCann was acting prime minister and acting minister of all other departments.

The cabinet is expected to make a number of important appointments and to announce decisions on several problems. The date of the first meeting of the new parliament may also be announced.

Mr. St. Laurent is expected to shuffle his cabinet to fill the vacant portfolio of minister of public works. The post was formerly held by Hon. Alphonse Poirier, now a justice judge of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Postmaster-General Cote is expected to be named public works minister. Mr. Cote's portfolio will probably be filled by Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott in the last parliament.

The prime minister may appoint Mr. Abbott to another portfolio, since Mr. Abbott has made it plain that he doesn't want the taxing job. The latest speculation is that he may swap with Justice Minister Garson.

Mr. St. Laurent may also fill the important post of clerk of the Privy Council after the Wednesday cabinet meeting. The position was formerly held by J. W. Pickersgill, appointed secretary of state shortly before the election.

However, there is speculation that Pickersgill may be switched to another cabinet post.

Aerial Hunt Abandoned

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP)—United States aerial forces Saturday night stopped searching for Ellis Hall, New Mexico oil man, and his four passengers who disappeared in a plane August 17.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Ira McMullen, in charge of the search, said the search has been so thorough it is obvious taxpayers' money would be wasted in any further effort.

Meanwhile, Dr. F. J. Hibben, whose 17-year-old son Patrick was one of the five persons aboard the Hall plane, said he is not giving up hope.

The University of New Mexico professor said he would follow up a possible clue reported by a woman 18 miles south of Prince George in the interior of British Columbia. She reported seeing a plane similar to the missing Hall craft the evening it disappeared after taking off from Annette Island, near Ketchikan, for Bellingham, Wash.

Lewis Proposes Unity Demand

WASHINGTON (AP)—John showed a happy worker lugging L. Lewis called on U.S. union members Saturday to "rise up" and force their leaders to merge labor organizations into one big American workers' benefits federation.

The AFL and CIO recently have renewed merger talks, but they did it without consulting the workers.

Lewis' statement said they were "conferring the matter to death" and never would get anywhere unless forced to it. The Lewis statement was one of a series of Labor Day messages from labor leaders. Most of them dwelled heavily on the dangers of Communism and the superior position of American workers over those elsewhere in the world.

Such statements came from Secretary of Labor Martin P. Durkin, AFL president, George Meany, and CIO president, Walter Reuther.

A cartoon labeled "Pravda" on the front page of the AFL weekly newspaper, of promise and progress. We The News Reporter, summed up all expect to live a little better the idea expressed by most. It year by year.

Naval Officer Sails Again; Life on Beach Too Dull

SOUTHAMPTON (CP)—When the Japanese seized Singapore he dived into shark-infested seas and swam for a good-bye to years of perilous day—until he was captured and put in a prison camp for three years.

But he hated life "on the beach" and dreamed all the time of doing something exciting again.

Friday he and another Royal Navy hand, E. B. Thornton, 39, put out in a nineteen knot for the West Indies—and maybe a cruise around the world.

Clark said they hope to reach the West Indies early in December, if the weather is friendly.

In 1940, he commanded a British destroyer which stormed Narvik, Norway, and sank several Nazi warships hiding in a fjord.

Later he jumped off the sinking battleship Repulse off Malaya and swam ashore to organize guerrilla warfare against the Japanese.

Labor Day in Canada

LABOR DAY will be observed throughout the world tomorrow with different rites and with varied emphasis. Here in Canada it will be a national holiday and universally enjoyed. That is a healthy, happy way to have it. Canadians like a worker, and find dignity in any labor that is done with good will. It is the drone who is suspected in our society. While the last 50 years have seen many changes in industrial relations throughout the world, there are not many people who would care to turn back the clock to the callous and careless indifference of the past in so far as human conditions are concerned. The healthy and the happy worker is the producer every time, and that has come to be well understood in our economy.

It is probable that the lot of the average worker was never better in Canada than it is at the present time. Concession by industry in monetary returns, hours worked, accruing benefits and in other ways amount to a brand new charter for labor written in the course of the last few years. New responsibilities go with that position, however. Labor can be assured of its gains only so long as they are earned, and therefore truly productive. Concessions which contribute nothing to production, but pull down the general level of all workers by adding unreasonable charges on industry in the end can only defeat themselves. In a changing economy there is not much that can be rigid or unchanging. In the last analysis Canada prospers as the world opens its markets to her goods, and that will always be a highly competitive trade.

What one can feel happy about in Canada's labor relations at the moment is the extent to which labor has cleaned its house of the trouble-makers. That is a good augury for the future. It is some guarantee that industrial relations will continue on a give and take basis, with a frank exchange of all that can be mutually helpful on both sides. We are a nation with a built-in capacity to achieve. Let us keep it so, as the future unfolds.

Not a Matter for Law

AT its annual meeting in mid-September the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, which is the national organization of the boards of trade and chambers of commerce of the Dominion, will discuss a motion from Dorval, Quebec, calling on Parliament to outlaw Communism and all Communist groups. The preamble to the motion objects to the fact that the Labor Progressive Party was granted "radio time and other democratic privileges during the election campaign."

While one may appreciate Dorval's concern over the possibility of Communist influence in Canadian affairs, recent events suggest that extreme measures to offset that influence no longer seem necessary. Time was—and not so many years ago—when Communism did appear to be gaining ground a little in Canada, and this paper along with others inclined towards the view that legal steps might in the end become necessary to check something inimical to the welfare of Canada and the freedom of the human being.

The tide, if it was a tide, has turned since. The very election giving rise to this resolution is its own negative answer to the question: Is Communism a threat to democracy in Canada? The LPP failed to elect a single candidate to a seat in Parliament. So meagre were the votes for Communist candidates that none of the many who ran for election was able to save his deposit. Thus as a political party or as a threat to the nation, the Communists in this country stand discredited—a sometimes noisy but utterly ineffectual group incapable of overthrowing a roadblock, let alone constitutional government.

As for the democratic privileges given to the LPP during the election, it is important to remember that this is a democratic country, and that the LPP, no matter how much one may abhor its avowed purposes, received nothing to which free men are not entitled. In the matter of radio time, it was made clear by Mr. Gerald Waring in his reports from Ottawa that the LPP fulfilled all the rigid requirements of the CBC, which grants time on the air only to properly constituted political parties running enough candidates to be able to form a government if elected.

Surely it is better for Canada to combat the small and waning influence of Communism within its borders by exposing it for what it is, leaving it to the good sense of Canadians to do the rest rather than attempting to apply the force of discriminatory law.

Westminster Abbey

THE report that an anonymous Canadian has pledged $100,000 to the Westminster Abbey Restoration Fund directs attention to the historic shrine that was the focal point of most of the civilized world during the Coronation. The Abbey is in a serious state of disrepair, and unless restoration is begun almost immediately some parts of the building will have to be closed and irreparable decay might occur.

The restoration fund was launched last January and to date only about one-third of the million-pound objective has been reached. The fund took a back seat when the spring floods played havoc with some parts of England, necessitating a public appeal for financial help, and it was sidetracked a second time when the Coronation period came along. Now renewed steps are being taken to remind Britons, and indirectly the whole Commonwealth, of the need for swift action to safeguard the future of the famous old building.

The Coronation itself is used as an argument for state responsibility in the matter by a prominent British trade union official, who points out that if it was necessary for the government to spend nearly £800,000 on preparing the Abbey for the ceremony then it should be willing to spend more on preserving the actual fabric of this ancient shrine. That seems logical enough, yet the British have ever been fond of the voluntary method of raising funds for a variety of causes.

In all probability the fund objective will be reached in time, and other Commonwealth citizens may follow the example of the unnamed Canadian who has made such a generous contribution, not in such large measure but in token of their sympathetic interest in the efforts to preserve a building that in itself reflects the long continuity of British history. In any case it is certain that authorities will not stand idly by and watch Westminster Abbey fall into ruins.

LEARNED TO SWIM

Sir,—I would like to say "thank you" for the Colonist's swim classes. It was amazing to see a group of timid youngsters last July develop into confident swimmers in a few weeks under Mrs. Naysmith's capable guidance. I sincerely hope that the classes will be continued next summer and that many more parents will permit their children to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity.

MRS. R. BLAKE,

ROUGH LACROSSE PLAY

Sir,—The Roman Coliseum was also an arena, but that seems to me to be insufficient reason why we should try in our arena to emulate the blood sports of the Caesars.

Lacrosse is a fascinating sport. At one time in the east it was killed by the brutality with which it was played. It will be too bad if the Inter-City League goes the same way. The referees admittedly have a tough job. They must try to eliminate rough play and at the same time hold spectator appeal by a not too frequent use of penalties.

I, and no doubt many hundreds like me, are not altogether in agreement with this policy. We hold that undue roughness should be punished regardless of its effect on spectator appeal. We have no doubt but that in the long run the better kind of spectators would uphold them in their actions.

I do not, of course, expect the minority who enjoy violence instead of skill, or who, like one who sat near to me, jeered at Hetherington every time he had a goal scored against him, to agree. But I can assure you that these are a small, though vociferous, minority and that the majority of those who enjoy watching lacrosse would welcome a cessation of the brutality that has been witnessed in the last few games.

The Shamrocks are a fine bunch of sportsmen and never resort to rough methods until forced to do so. It will be a sorry day for lacrosse if their skill is overcome by purely physical pounding.

R. C. BOWEN,

DONORS THANKED

Sir,—May we convey our thanks to all those kind people who by their combined efforts made the open house held at SPCA Shelter on August 26 last such a success.

All those who donated articles, loaned equipment or gave their services will have the satisfaction of knowing that their contributions brought results which will benefit the animals which the Society devotes its energies to protecting. The large attendance clearly demonstrates that there are a large number of animal lovers on our island.

Thinking Aloud

"...of shoes—and ships—and sailing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I SEE by the papers that the sixth and last of the Churchillian volumes on the war is about ready for the press, and I suppose I'd better get ready to make room on my bookshelf. Already there's a formidable red-backed array taking up a lot of space, all labeled Winston S. Churchill.

Not that they're really formidable. If Churchill were writing about a lamp post he would make the subject interesting, dullness and he never being bed-fellows.

True enough at this late date accounts of war campaigns are for the general reader somewhat redundant, especially since V-E Day didn't bring real peace in Europe. For the specialist, however, the final Churchill volume will be a prize.

I shall read it myself with enjoyment, I daresay, lingering particularly over the memoranda he always prints at the end of his books, those notes to colleagues and officials concerning odd matters that came to his eagle attention. How the man found time to bother with so many details while waging a war is a mystery.

Word that this last volume, to be called "Triumph and Tragedy," will soon be published makes one realize the old maestro must have made good use of his recent enforced rest. Apparently he is not yet down and out by any means.

The tragedy, I suppose, relates to the postwar aftermath, the terrible cleavage we call the cold war. No one knows more about the subject than Churchill and his recorded view should be illuminating. If he tells it all, that is. Writers of history who are also helping to shape the world's destiny perforce write under wraps. It is not always polite or diplomatically desirable to call a spade a spade.

For myself I am anxious to find out what he really thinks of the political decision to let the Russians take Berlin, a privilege that has boomeranged violently and left a festering sore in Germany. It has also landed us in a nice pickle, as the front pages have been making clear for years now.

I doubt that Churchill was to blame. He has too large a grasp of history. He knows that wars are not necessarily won on the battlefield but that it is the aftermath which counts most. Yet he must have shared in the decision, unless he were outvoted.

It is of course easy to be wise afterwards, to see with hindsight what may not have been visible to foresight, but Allied leaders can scarcely use that alibi. They should have had a wisdom denied to the rest of us. It was obvious, or I think certainly should have been to them, that to make an island of Berlin and leave it in a Soviet sea was asking for the kind of trouble that has engulfed us.

I know that in those days we were kow-towing to the Russians, although I've never been satisfied why, and trying to keep on good terms with them, bribing them to be good boys afterwards and stay pally. Since this policy didn't pay off, and he must have been a supreme optimist who thought it would in view of Russian behaviour even as an ally, we couldn't have been in a worse position and probably would have been in a much better one had the Allies not pandered to the Soviet state.

There is no doubt that Eisenhower's forces could have been in Berlin first, in fact could have moved swiftly all along the line and deprived the Red Army of much of the European territory it now holds in subjection. They were held back, and we are paying the penalty today.

At all events it will be interesting to have Churchill's side of the story, assuming he deals with it fully, as I fancy he will.

This volume will close what by any measure is a remarkable series, particularly so when the age of the author is considered. Not long ago I walked by the door of his house in Downing Street and the door suddenly opened. Unfortunately it was only a servant who emerged, although later I watched his master as he moved majestically up the Abbey aisle like a British man-of-war, a hard inapt simile in his case. He is hard to resist, and it will be hard also to resist the lure of the last of a monumental history. Sir Winston Churchill is, indubitably, quite a man.

On the Record...

Free Food Plan Ill-Advised

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE giving away of packages of American food to all East Germans who come to the borders of West Berlin to receive them has been resumed, with an estimated 120,000 distributed the first day.

The authorities operating this hail it as one of the most successful moves in the "cold war." But this is not the opinion of all the Western allies, or of all West Berliners, particularly the social workers, volunteer and professional, who are in daily contact with problems of human needs.

Do Americans know that this project was started against the advice of the leading welfare agencies which operate in both zones of Germany? These are the Inner Mission of the Evangelical Churches; the International Catholic Agency, "Caritas"; the "Workers' Aid" supported by the trade unions; and the "Parity Group," which merges various smaller agencies including the Salvation Army and the Mennonites. All of these deplore the project and have held aloof from it, the Red Cross alone co-operating.

Before the give-away action began it was frankly advertised as a smart "brainwave" in the cold war. To many Germans it appears as a sheer publicity stunt. And wholesale give-aways usually reach the most greedy. The only laugh I heard from a dour audience in an East Berlin newsreel theatre was at a shot of a very fat woman carrying off her package with a look of triumph. The comment was, "This starving sister is saved by the Americans."

The old, ill, infirm, and penniless cannot afford railroad tickets more expensive than the value of the food. Now packages are being given to those who produce identity cards or other documents for East Germans who cannot come themselves, but there is no way of checking on the ultimate destination or how many "repeaters" there are among the beneficiaries. And the Communists are now clamping down on railroad tickets.

During the earlier give-away weeks, 80,000 of the packages were dropped into wire baskets for the relief of West Berlin unemployed. One West Berliner out of every 10 employables is on relief. West Berlin has the

The objections of the four big welfare organizations are:

It is cynical to exploit hunger as an instrument of political propaganda;

The food never reaches the most needy;

The moral consequences are evil;

The project increases Communist oppression, and fosters tensions for which the allies are unprepared.

It is kicking back among the poor of West Berlin, and militates against the continuance of quiet actions expressive of German solidarity

Leadership Begins at Home

(From The Toronto Globe and Mail)

"WHAT always amazes me is how few people you have in this tremendous country, this country with such limitless possibilities."

So Field Marshal Montgomery declared in opening the Canadian National Exhibition. He is by no means the first distinguished visitor to express amazement on this score. Virtually, every one who comes here is surprised that this great and wealthy Dominion—a land which, as Viscount Montgomery said, contains in its soil, practically everything that man desires—should be occupied by fewer than 15,000,000 people. Many Canadians, though not nearly enough of them, are surprised by it themselves.

But it is not a pleasant surprise. Underpopulation is as much a cause of weakness as overpopulation. Lack of people to develop resources can hold back a nation even more than lack of resources to develop. That has been Canada's trouble from the beginning. Rich in so many raw materials, she is poor in what Viscount Montgomery correctly described as the most important raw material of all—manpower.

At one time, Canadians could claim that this was their own business. If, by choice, they preferred a small population, nobody had any right to criticize them for it—or even express surprise. But it is not our own business any longer. We have pledged our capacities to the cause of freedom—in general and to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in particular. Grateful as they are for that pledge, our NATO allies must think how much more valuable it would be if there were fifty or a hundred million Canadians standing behind it, instead of a mere fifteen million.

Viscount Montgomery calls on Canada to "lead the Western World." But before we can offer leadership abroad, we must demonstrate it at home. A nation which remains undeveloped and undefended while millions of useful immigrants are within its reach, is not ready to lead other nations. It could do with same leadership itself.

From Files of The Daily British Colonist of September, 1886

By G. E. MORTIMORE

THE endless squabble between the Colonial Assembly and Governor A. E. Kennedy dragged on. The governor's executive council and the assembly took turns in chopping up the estimates. The executive council removed all the separate items in the bill of supply, and left it to the governor's discretion to say how the total monies would be spent.

The assembly affirmed its sole right to initiate and amend money bills, but declined to send the bill of supply back to the Upper House, taking the view that the measure had defeated itself and could not be used.

Colonial officials stood in danger of going without their salaries, but this was nothing new. It had happened on other occasions in Vancouver Island's history of financial and constitutional floundering.

Over the local arguments spread the shadow of union with mainland British Columbia. Rumors (some to be proved true) said that the government in London had willed it, whether residents of the Island colony agreed or not. Governor Seymour of British Columbia was said to be on his way back from a trip to London, to take over the joint colonies.

Meanwhile, there were still local matters to be decided. The Colonial Assembly was toying with a law which ordered Indians to fence their potato patches at once. A nameless correspondent objected to it most strenuously.

"Do Mr. De Cosmos and his satellites know that the Indians are now away on their annual visits to the fisheries? Would he and his gang have the women put up the fences? Or would he call the Indians back from the fishing to do so? Have the Indians axes for the purpose? Many have not. Indians again do not understand splitting rails so well as some white men."

"It is cruel to be constantly calling the Indians idle. . . . The Indian who cultivates his acre of potatoes can not be considered an idle man. Is it wise to discourage him so by arbitrary proceedings?"

world's highest recorded suicide rate. One gets a false picture of the city in the comely suburbs of Dahlem and Zehlendorf. I spent most of my time in the working-class districts of Wedding and Neukölln, listening to those who throng the welfare centres and talking with social workers. There is a kickback. "We want to have the East Germans helped. But are you sure all who get the food really need it?"

The speaker was a pregnant woman with tear-filled eyes and quivering lips. A deaconess explained, when she left, "she will not survive childbirth without more vitamins and proteins."

On the underground stations between the sectors of Berlin a constant black-market traffic goes on mostly conducted by juveniles whom unemployment has turned into apathy, and despite heavy policing. Some of the food packets have found their way into this illegal market.

Is this project fulfilling a considered objective? If so, what is it?

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IN fretting over the shocking and steadily mounting loss of life, limb and health through motor accidents, we ought to bear in mind the astonishing fact that there are so few accidents. Bad as the figures are, they ought to be 10 times worse when we reflect on all the circumstances affecting motor traffic both in cities and on the open highways.

The drivers of these tens of thousands of cars are every conceivable type and grade of man, woman and teenage child. They are in every stage of health. Some of those who go zipping so expertly along the highways or through the pedestrian-crowded streets are going to be dead of sudden heart attacks tonight or tomorrow. Many can barely see; some are deaf; others are half-blind due to anything from a bad cold to a steadily mounting onset of gall bladder or tuberculosis. We have merely to check the daily intake of hospitals, the daily record sheets of doctors far and wide, against the number of those of them who yesterday were driving cars, in order to confirm the individual hazard that rides in a fairly formidable percentage of the vehicles on the road every day of the week.

Apart from health, the drivers are of every degree not only of experience and skill in driving but of ordinary intelligence and common sense as well. Many of them are natural-born misfits; the men eternal fumble and stumblers in their jobs; the women dreadful housekeepers whose homes are in a state of riot all the time, who can't run a furnace, who burn half their cook, who never were on time for an appointment in their lives. But they are all trusted to drive a car in traffic. A goodly percentage of them are not even driving their own cars, but are in papa's car, or a friend's car.

Take a look at one of those endless, onrushing processions on our highways on a week-end at this time of year. Nose to bumper, they boil along. Consider all the human factors involved in that terrific mechanical phenomenon. And then marvel that so few of them come to grief.

With the Classics

The rivulet
Sends forth glad sounds, and tripping o'er its bed
Of pebbly sands, or leaping down the rocks.
Seems, with continuous laughter, to rejoice
In its own being. Softly tread the marge.
Lest from her midway perch thou scare the wren
That dips her bill in water. The cool wind,
That stirs the stream in play, shall come to thee.
Like on that loves thee nor will let thee pass
Ungreeted, and shall give its light embrace.

Unnamed Logger of 60 Sensation Of Diamond Jubilee Comox Fair

COURTENAY — A 60-year-old logger was the sensation of the Diamond Jubilee Comox Fair on Saturday. The woodsman, unnamed, climbed about 60 feet up an 80-foot spar tree and topped the crowd was weak from watching, but he just climbed on top and waved like there was nothing to it.

It was the most successful fall fair the district has ever had, Mr. Hind said. Entries were up 35 per cent over last year and the children's day held on Thursday was a tremendous success.

The biggest cattle show in years was held this year and the sheep show and sheep dog trials were one of the best he said he could remember.

Mrs. J. L. Cairns of Courtenay, an annual winner in the many exhibits open to women, had 105 entries listed, but at press time Saturday night results had not been tabulated.

One of the largest Indian exhibits ever entered was on display this year with craft work sent from tribes all over the Island and the B.C. Coast.

FINE FLOWER SHOW

The fair also sported one of the biggest and best flower shows it has ever had with entries coming in from all over Vancouver Island and the Mainland, Mr. Hind said.

All in all, the diamond jubilee fair was the best anyone can remember, he said.

Labor Day will be baseball tournament day, considered part of the annual fair but really an event on its own, he reported.

Dorothy Peacock 'Lady of the Lake'

LAKE COWICHAN—The winner of the "Lady of the Lake" contest for this year is Dorothy Peacock, Mesachie Lake and Honeymoon Bay candidate.

Gloria Lotzian, Lake Cowichan, came second, and Anita Chouinard, Youbou, third.

The counting of the ballots was done by the United Organizations' committee on Friday evening.

The investiture of the new "Lady of the Lake" takes place at the Labor Day sports at Lake Cowichan.

The retiring "Lady" is Doreen Towle, Lake Cowichan.

BOOKS

Oxford University Press has a special treat in store for Victoria: it is bringing out a volume of the unpublished writings of Emily Carr, Victoria's most artistic native daughter.

According to advance notices, the book will be a collection of her previous books and will delight those who have yet to be introduced to the famed painter as a writer.

The new book is a collection of word sketches suggested by the most compelling interest in her life apart from her painting—her animal and bird friends, pets and untamed creatures alike—and four stories that are said to reveal a new side to her literary skill.

As all Canada now knows, Emily Carr was a genuine artist in two media—her writings are now almost as famous as her paintings.

Her observations were the fruits of an original and powerful mind, and in her new book, to be titled "The Heart of a Peacock," they are expressed by means of visual descriptions that bring her subjects to life with remarkable precision and imagination.

Oxford Press says that like her previous books, the new collection was inspired by her rich sense of the comic, and by her experiences of loyalty, courage and unselfishness in the people and animals she knew.

Marion Crawford, that incorrigible gossip who was once governess of the Queen and Princess Margaret, will soon have another "up-to-date" study of Princess Margaret on the press.

"Crawfie's" new book includes what her American publisher calls many behind-the-scenes details of the Princess's social activities, and her thoughts on love and marriage.

An advertisement in an eastern magazine for Somerset Maugham's edition of his favorite Kipling stories revives a joke that may go back to the author's heyday:

"How do you like Kipling," the girl is asked.

"I don't know, I never kiplied," she replied.

A new Canadian book for children, just published by Macmillan, sets what may be some kind of international record for the Toronto author Dr. Joyce Kilmer.

Macmillan is releasing it simultaneously in three countries: England, the United States and Canada.

Farley Mowat has won an Anisfield-Wolf Award of $2,000 for his book, "People of the Deer," which was published by McClelland & Stewart last year.

The award is given annually for significant books published in the United States or abroad on the subject of racial relations in the contemporary world, which, by their presentation of these problems may help in their solution.

The prize is administered annually by a committee from the Saturday Review, New York University and Yale University. "People of the Deer" is an account of the Canadian author's stay with the Inuit Eskimos. In the citation accompanying the $2,000, Professor Linton of Yale said: "The book is a full-scale, well-rounded picture of an inspiring people, as well as a plea for the understanding help without which these people will vanish from the earth forever."

The Mystery Writers of America, whose slogan is "Crime Doesn't Pay Enough," have just let out a news leak about an occupational hazard in its ranks.

Last summer a theft of 72 cents was discovered in a pried open petty-cash box in the organization's New York headquarters and, although all the best member-sleuths in the area went promptly to work, they still haven't discovered who dunnit.

'Call Me Lucky'

Story of Crosby's Career Terrific Entertainment

"Call Me Lucky," by Bing Crosby, as told to Pete Martin (Misson).

In the relaxed, frank and humorous style that characterizes his radio and movie work, Bing Crosby writes of his life and times in what probably isn't a very great biography. But its terrific entertainment.

It's not a straight tale starting with Crosby's birth and working up to the present.

Bing says he's giving us his story the way he'd play a juke box. Put in a nickel and one anecdote comes up. Put in another and something else perhaps years later or earlier is unfolded.

SECRET OF SUCCESS
In one of his more serious moments, Bing gives us what he says is the secret of his success: luck.

"I've been lucky," he writes. "I started with no particular aim—other than the vague general one of wanting to sing and be in show business. I was seeking no great achievement. I just did what I liked to do."

And the theme of his book, if it has one, is that through luck he moved on from one good thing to another until he arrived at the time when a taxi driver—thinking his fare looked quite a bit like Bing Crosby—confided in Bing that Crosby had more money than the Rocketeers.

In another explanation of his success Bing writes: "Every man who sees one of my movies or listens to my records or who hears me on the radio, believes firmly that he sings as well as I do, especially when he's in the bathroom shower. It's no trick for him to believe this because I have named the mannerisms of a famous singer and I have very little voice."

The most entertaining part of the book is the rich store of anecdotes about show business, golf and horse racing, three fields in which Der Bingle has achieved some prominence.

Once he entered a talent contest, walked on stage without makeup but under the name of Charlie Senevsky, sang his best—and was beaten by a fellow imitating Bing Crosby.

WIG MANDATORY
Because his balding head makes a wig mandatory in his movie work he is always plotting to get scenes moved out of doors so that he can wear a hat instead of the uncomfortable "divot."

In one of his films he even tried to wear a hat in bed, but had to settle for a night cap with a tassel.

With all his love of show business, Bing says that what he likes best of all are field and stream sports. He puts in a nice plug for Vancouver Island's tree and coho fishing, and tells many a fine yarn of excursions in search of fish and game in many parts of the continent.

It's a fine relaxed book that tells you lots about Bing and the people he knows. If you like Bing Crosby, you'll like this book.

'Honest' Story About Mounties Written by Sergeant with Force

OTTAWA (CP)—An honest, good-natured Canadian Mountie decided one day that he should write an honest-to-goodness book about life in the service.

That was seven years ago, shortly after Sgt. Oscar Olson's horse had dumped him roughly to the ground. Today, fully recovered from an injury, he is the proud author of a 300-page novel.

The book, soon to be published in Canada and the United States, is entitled "Mountie on Trial." Sgt. Olson first decided to call it "White Snow" but his American publishers thought it should have a name with more punch; one more appealing to the movie-makers.

STORY OF FRAMEUP
"Mountie on Trial" is the story of a constable who is framed into the penitentiary by his unfaithful wife and her lover. The rascals planted stolen bonds in his desk drawer. These were discovered by the Mountie's superintendent, and up the river he went for several years.

Released from prison, the Mountie decided to "get his man," or rather, his wife's man. The chase led through some of the wildest country in the northwest, country in which Sgt. Olson himself served many long months. It took Sgt. Olson seven years to complete his novel, revisiting it eight times. He says the actual research for it, however, took 24 years—the 24 years he has been in the RCMP.

"To find out what my 'Mountie on Trial' really had been up against when he served his penitentiary term," Sgt. Olson said, "I went through St. Vincent-de-Paul near Montreal and made a study of life as men-in-prison live it."

Taking pains to create authentic atmosphere for his fanciful plot, the sergeant even took the weather into consideration. When it rained outside, he wrote those portions of the book in which the weather matched; when there was a blizzard, he wrote of days and nights of searching in the white snows of the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

FEEL OF CHARACTERS
"That way," he says, "it gave me more of the feel of the characters as I went along. The ring of real life came more truly when the weather outside was the same as that required in the book's various episodes."

"Mountie on Trial," which has been "cleared" by RCMP headquarters, is to be published both in regular book form and for the popular "pocket book" editions.

Sgt. Olson was born on a Saskatchewan homestead 46 years ago. He joined the RCMP at the age of 22 and, in succeeding years, served in many parts of Canada. His present duties are with the force's headquarters in Ottawa.

And how does the Mountie like life as an author? Fine, he says. In fact, so well that he already has begun work on his next novel, an Indian tale of Western Canada.

'Man on the Tight Rope'
Well-Knit Circus Novel

Everything didn't go too smoothly. There was a feud with the rival circus, the problem of his daughter's sudden attraction to one of the horse handlers, the certainty that there was a spy in the circus, and the everyday battles and tensions among the high-strung performers.

TRIUMPHANT CLIMAX
This thin novel catches all of this and races it through to a triumphant climax without wasting a word or an idea.

The picture of circus life is alive with atmosphere, the characters are sketched clearly, and the plot is tightly handled to give almost any reader a few hours of first-class entertainment.

GETS ULTIMATUM
After constant police checks and questionings, he had been warned that either he get rid of an aging performer who refused to stop uttering aristocratic sentiments—or be branded himself as an enemy of the people. He had a week.

"Gone With the Windors"
By Iles Brody, is described by its publishers as a "frank and forthright appraisal of the most celebrated couple of our times."

Deborah Kerr Sought as Ferrer Co-Star After Success in 'From Here to Eternity'

BY SHEILAH GRAHAM
HOLLYWOOD—Jose Ferrer wants Deborah Kerr to play the shrew in "The Shrike." And after Debbie's success in "From Here to Eternity," I think she'd be great... so would Olivia De Havilland who should make another picture at this point in her career.

It seems to be more than a rumor that Jose Schenck has taken over several offices on the second floor of the Metro administration building—for the "Oklahoma" filming.

PARIS IN HOLLYWOOD
This sounds typical: Ava Gardner, if she does "The Paris Story" at all, will do it all in Hollywood. She's due here any day now, and won't be leaving us again for quite a spell.

Darryl Zanuck okayed Hildegarde Neff for "A Love Story," to be made in Europe beginning around mid-October.

Rita Hayworth is standing firm. She won't promise Prince Aly or the Aga Khan that daughter Yasmin will be raised as a Moslem. She'll ear Yasmin as a Catholic until the girl is old enough to make up her own mind.

Kirk Douglas will follow "Ulysses" with "Attilla the Hun," again with Sylvano Mangano. And it seems to be official that his private life is now dedicated to young Italian film actress Maria Carmela Portincelli.

NEXT MRS. SMITH
When Mrs. Kent-Smith divorces Kent, look for Elaine Stritch to be the next Mrs. Smith. She played the Ethel Merman role on the road in "Call Me Madam."

While Cameron Mitchell is the voice of Christ in "The Robe," Cecil B. De Mille's "Ten Commandments" a huge symphonic orchestra will be the voice when Moses goes up Mount Sinai to receive the commandments.

Bing Crosby attended the "secret" preview in Spokane of "Little Boy Lost." Some secret! The tale told everything except the big Paramount star's name. The entire Gonzaga student body attended. The university president was there, of course. He was a classmate of Bing's.

Jane Russell will have to be the strongest minded lass in the world to refuse Howard Hughes' fantastic new contract. I've seen the figures!

Now that Shirley Temple has broken the ice and appeared on television—for the multiple sclerosis telethon—she'll repeat the figures!

Kinsey's Book Goes on Sale September 9

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—W. B. Saunders & Co., publishers of Dr. Alfred Kinsey's "Sexual Behavior of the Human Male," announced Friday that the book's release date at book stores has been advanced from September 15 to September 9.

Harry R. Most, vice-president, said the action was taken, when it was learned that some New York book stores had begun selling the book. In order to protect other book-sellers the release date has been moved up.

WHEN KIDNEYS Work Too Often

next year for the national show. "I wasn't going to appear, as I told you," Shirley explained to me. "But when I woke up and turned on the set and saw how tired everyone looked, I just drove down without anything prepared and went on."

Danny Thomas, incidentally, has done a color film for the Multiple Sclerosis Association that really is terrific. There are apparently more victims of this dread disease than of polio.

HAS BIG SECRET
And you can take the top 22 to 15 years without knowing!

Laurence Olivier Productions asked $50,000 from Paramount for a repeat with Peter-Finch. I hear he received half that for "Elephant Walk." As of now, no repeat.

BIG REQUEST
Marie Macdonald's husband, Harry Katz, was bequeathed half-a-million dollars from his adopted father whom he revered.

Dana Andrews and Paul Brinkman came down with dysentery before they even reached the interior of Africa. But Jeanne Crain, who co-stars with Dana in "Duel in the Jungle," is in the pink and buying a new safari wardrobe in Johannesburg. The glad rags she brought from Hollywood were to impractical.

Quite a scene in court when

Junkyard Blaze Quickly Put Out

A grass fire swept through the Johnson Street junkyard owned and operated by Harry Haigh, 1586 Rockland, Saturday afternoon, but did little damage to material standing around the yard.

Victoria Fire Chief Frank Briers said most of the material in the yard was metal and the fire was quickly extinguished.

McCall Bross, directors of the Floral Funeral Chapel, are pleased to announce that Mr. Robert J. Dymond, has rejoined them, following an absence of 10 years. Mr. Dymond is well-known in Victoria through his association with the B.C. Electric.

Marilyn Egskine lost her ease against her former landlady over the claimed damage to her house. Marilyn's mother now wants to appeal to a higher state court!

Navy Contingent's King Neptune Routine Big Hit at PNE

Daily Colonist Victoria, B.C., Sun., Sept. 6, 1953 7

BY BRUCE YOUNG
A navy contingent from Victoria pushed the city of Van-cover 3,468 miles southward twice every day during the PNE. At least this assumption might have been made upon viewing the "Crossing the Line" ceremonies skillfully performed by a group of officers and men from HMCS Naden. The traditional ceremony, which dates back to the days when the navy relied on wind and sail, kept visitors to the big exhibition with a smile on their faces and gave them a new understanding of life in Canada's Navy.

HAS PRIVILEGES
The "Crossing the Line" ceremony has, of course, the venerable King Neptune (CPO Duncan Kennedy) as the big star. Ancient law gives him the privilege of giving the treatment to those who are crossing the equator for the first time. His beautiful queen, PO S. Clarke, sits on the sidelines just above the waterline.

According to Lieut. J. H. Moir, who is in charge of Operation Neptune, the main stress is placed upon authenticity. Thousands of PNE visitors saw the jovial scene re-enacted in exactly the same manner as the "real thing." Even the moans and groans of the victims are convincing demonstrations of the agony which they undergo in being initiated.

MEDICAL EXAMINATION
First part of the agenda is a thorough medical examination by the doctor (CPO Goodman). This is somewhat at variance with modern medical techniques and the shouts of agony are reminiscent of the day when doctors had a sketchy knowledge of the human body.

The Barber (CPO Howard Williams) and this appears to be a trade which has little changed, performs the job of sprucing up the victim for the main part of the ceremony. He must be thoroughly shipshape before he is permitted to be doused by the Bears (AS).

Farnham, LS Manzer, OS Linnett and OS Bourbeau who are located in a canvas water tank generally filled by the Vancouver Fire Department.

OTHERS IN CAST
Other parts are played by the Herald (CPO Bob Carter) who announces the program and gives an account of the sins of the victim and the Policeman (OS Price) who ensures that the victim is present. A Trumpeter (LS Beech) provides solemn and suitable music. This ceremony has been going on all through the fair and occasionally some big shots are the victims. For instance J. C. S. Moffat, president of the PNE, was lathered and doused Thursday last. At other times the victims are drawn from a roster of three navy personnel—AS Costick, LS Bell, and LS McIntyre.

The navy contingent is under the command of Naden's chief executive officer—Commander G. Huntley Davidson. Lt. Commander H. G. Cuthbert heads the Naden band which has made a tremendous impression in Vancouver. Special favorites with the large audiences are Commander Cuthbert's own compositions, sometimes featured during the daily concert. The sunset ceremony, which the Legislative Buildings, has proved to be an even bigger hit with the people of Vancouver—been impressed by the Navy ver. More than 100,000 have performance. Record crowds at the special packed the grandstand at Exhibition Park to view the impressive Coronation fair had broken all previous records by Saturday. The fair ends on Monday. A big turnout which is anticipated for Labor Day might well more fair visitors will have pushed the mark close to 900,000.

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANG

Fishing can be fun for everyone, even those who are unfortunate enough not to be able to see what they are doing. And next Wednesday, through the laudable cooperation of the Capital City Yacht Club with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, about 25 sightless persons are going to have a little salmon competition of their own.

Mrs. D. Stark of the CNIB has announced that the derby will start at 2 in the afternoon from Canoe Cove and end at 5:30 with a reception of the CNIB at the Yacht Club.

Prizes will be presented at Canoe Cove at the end of the fishing period and the Ladies' Auxiliary to the CNIB will serve refreshments. This, Mrs. Stark said, is the first time that an event like this has been held. It is hoped that it may become an annual affair. Fishing is perhaps the one sport a sightless person can really enjoy.

Fishing reports are still good from all Island points and it looks as if the Labor Day week-end will be a good one for anglers.

For those anxious to tie into a tye, there is Comox. Port Alberni and Campbell River. For those who haven't got a reservation for a boat, a phone call may prevent a fruitless trip. Hundreds of anglers have planned a fishing holiday and boats everywhere are at a premium.

Coho can be found in almost any of the more popular fishing grounds. Quite a number of Victorians are bound for Qualicum Beach, where a promise of fine weather will make the trip doubly enjoyable. Here, bucktail flies should do well, while small spoons and other coho lures are also likely to score.

Closer to Victoria, there is a good chance of catching salmon off Trial Island, Ten Mile Point, in Satellite Channel, and, best of all, Saanich Inlet.

Coho, good-sized springs and large numbers of grise make Saanich Inlet a fine bet. Lighter tackle than is the vogue in these waters earlier in the season is recommended, particularly in the mornings, when two to four ounces of weight on nylon line has been enough. As the day wears along, more weight up to eight ounces should be added. The No. 4 silver Tom Mack is as good a lure as any, but plugs have been taking plenty of salmon with the Mac's. Squid doubly valuable because it has proven a good lure both for cohos and springs.

From Alan Maclean at Painter's Lodge comes another report that trout fishing is still good in the Campbell River area. Lower Campbell Lake is good for trollers. Willow Leaf trol with worm, and a small Gibbs spoon have been effective lures.

Campbell River reports 135 type salmon registered with the Tye club so far compared to 96 at a similar time last year. Biggest of the week was a 39-pounder boated by Mrs. Larry Odell of San Francisco.

Coho fishing is also good off Campbell River with Lowell Baker of Spokane netting a 15-pounder.

Another Spokane angler, R. J. Burns, was saved the job of netting when a coho he had hooked on a fly rod leaped right into his boat.

Salmon fishing off the Washington coast has been little short of phenomenal this year with plenty of huge king (tyee) salmon earlier and now a great run of silvers (coho).

At least 800 members of the Port Angeles Salmon Club are fishing in the finals of the annual derby, the prize list is worth about $5,000 and includes a new car, a cabin boat and an outboard-equipped boat. Parkville's Bill Klemm was out in front all by himself last week as he won a special salmon derby day at Qualicum with a 24-pound spring. Second prize went to a 9½-pound salmon caught by Fred Hayward Jr., Qualicum Beach. R. Corcoran, Seattle, won first prize in the final week of the Qualicum and District Fish and Game Association derby with a 23-pound six-ounce salmon, while second prize went to another Seattle angler, G. R. Branton, who entered an 18-pound, 10-ounce salmon.

Newton Breaks Record At Shearing Speedway

Mike Newton with a new Mercury engine in his '58' car, broke Dave Cooper's stock car track record at Shearing Speedway Saturday night.

Newton circled the track in 17.12 seconds, shaving one-tenth of a second off the mark set three weeks ago.

The stock A main event almost turned into a crash elimination race. Several of the favorites were knocked out of action in the jams and the race had to be restarted. It was finally won by Jack Rumley.

Cooper, the track's leading driver in both stock and big car events, won the helmet dash, placed third in the first heat of the big car events, and picked up a first in the third heat of the stock car events.

He was driving with a cast on his left foot, broken at work last week.

Results follow:

Big car: Helmet dash—Cooper, Ken; First heat—Cooper, Ken; Second heat—Cooper, Ken; Third heat—Cooper, Ken.

Stock: Main event—Rumley, Jack; First heat—Rumley, Jack; Second heat—Rumley, Jack; Third heat—Rumley, Jack.

Four football seasons in the capital.

Tom O'Malley, playing his third season with the Riders, called a near-perfect game and the Riders were never headed as they made it 6-0 at the quarter, 19-0 at the half, matched Montreal's sole converted touch-down in the third quarter and topped it off with a fourth quarter single.

GATHERS NO MOSS

Long, lean Avatus Stone, alleged to have jumped a Chicago Cardinals contract to come to Ottawa, scored two of the Ottawa majors on running plays. The former Syracuse Negro, romped around end on almost identical plays in the first half.

Bob Simpson grabbed an O'Malley pass to round out the first-half score.

Montreal's sole scoring contribution came on a third-quarter pass by Sam Etcheberry, who pitched from 35 yards out to Chuck Hunsinger on a picture play.

Paul Salata, a former Calgary Stampeder, took another O'Malley forward over the goal line to wind up the major scoring. Gene "Choo Choo" Roberts was used effectively against his former Montreal mates, converting all four Rider touch-downs and tearing up the ground on line plays.

Stone, besides scoring two majors, booted a beautiful spiral from mid-field to the deadline for the final point of the game.

Scorers follow:

Palmer—Bruce McLean 1, Bud Taylor 1, Leslie Price 2, Vic Wessels 1, Wayne Hunter 1, Total 6.
Esquimalt—Tom Wyatt 3, Dick Loewen 2, John McDonald 1, Harry Woodward 1, Total 7.

Put JBAA in News

James Bay Rowing Club's crack novice fours crew, which is undefeated in Pacific Northwest this summer, is shown above in one of the club's work-shells. Crew members are, back to front, Jack Donald, bow; Bob Jobbins, two; Don Stewart, three; Clive Watson, stroke, and Gordon Wallace, coxswain. (See story below.)

Novice Crew Aids Rowing Revival

BY IAN GLENDAY

James Bay Rowing Club, the oldest sculling organization on the Pacific Coast, is making a "comeback" this season after remaining relatively inactive since the start of the Second World War.

Established since 1888, the club started to slip in the late 30s, when war crippled operations. But a revival of interest, which started last season and received the biggest tonic this year when the novice fours crew went through the summer unbeaten, has resulted in a rejuvenated club.

The novice fours—a crew composed of first-year rowers—have won four major championships this season, all of them together last year, worked out at the YMCA during the winter, and took to the water in April. The coaching of Norm Edmonds and long hours of practice—four nights a week in which the crew covers about 32 miles—has developed the crew into a well-oiled machine.

The crew is composed of Clive Watson, stroke; Don Stewart, three; Bob Jobbins, two, and Jack Donald, bow. Gordon Wallace, who was rowswain for an Irish schoolboy championship crew and later at Queen's University of Belfast, puts them through a rugged pace.

"It can make the boys feel pretty miserable at times," Edmonds said. "Some of them wonder why they ever took up rowing."

The crew started off by winning the B.C. championships at Vancouver, then followed up with wins in the Pacific Northwest, Interior and North Pacific Amateur Oarsmen Association meets. At the NPAAO meet held recently, the Victoria crew came back with an hour's rest to compete in the junior fours event, finishing only two lengths behind a crew from Kelowna, which had been together for six years.

Edmonds looks for better things next year. The club, situated at the foot of Roberts Street, stores all its equipment in the basement of the Sea Cadet Barracks, which was originally built by the James Bay Rowing Club.

There is only enough space to store the costly shells and for a dressing room with no showers. Several firms in Victoria have offered assistance to build a new clubhouse at Elk Lake, where Edmonds hopes to stage the 1954 NPAAO meet.

And, of course, there is also the possibility that the novice fours will get a crack at the trials for the 1954 British Empire Games in Vancouver.

Manager Don Osborn announced Saturday that the veteran lefthander was suffering from a cracked bone in his left leg.

Cordell had won nine and lost seven.

Cougar-Coach Bill Reay Arrives in City; Veteran Ralph Almas To Replace Cotnoir

It's hardly been a week since Ross Lowe and Sam Lavitt and forwards Pentti Lund and Sam Bettio, and felt that some of the younger players sent out with the arrival of Billy Reay, the former centre star of the Montreal Canadiens, who is signed to coach the Victoria Cougars for the next two seasons.

Accompanying Reay was his family, wife Clare, 10-year-old Adele and Billy, Jr., only 18 months old. The Reays were house-hunting almost immediately and hope to be settled down before the end of the week.

Reay's arrival coincided with the announcement from general manager Fred Hutchinson of a change of goalkeepers for the Cougars. Charlie Hodge, whom Reay described as a highly-promising prospect, had been counted on to step right from the junior Montreal Canadiens into the Victoria nets but the job now belongs to Ralph Almas, a 29-year-old veteran of seven American Hockey League seasons.

Almas has the goalkeeping job all to himself. The Canadians apparently have other plans for Hodge and Jerry Cotnoir, who tended the nets for the Cougars last season, has been sold to Sherbrooke of the Quebec Hockey League.

Victoria's new netminder was born in Saskatchewan on April 26, 1924, and his last amateur action was with the Saskatoon Elks. He turned pro during the 1946-47 season with Indianapolis of the AHL and played one game with Detroit Red Wings that season. He joined the St. Louis Flyers for the 1948-49 season and remained with them through last season. He was purchased by the Canadiens when the Flyers gave up their AHL franchise at the end of last season. Reports are that he should fill the bill for the Cougars.

Reay, an unassuming, quiet type, expressed himself as well satisfied with the personnel the Cougars have for the 1953-54 season but, understandably, would venture no opinion on the forthcoming season until he has seen his players and the other clubs in action.

Asked if he planned to take a regular turn at centre, he replied, "I intend to give the younger players every chance. After all, I'm not trying to get back to the NHL."

Reay indicated, however, that he would see plenty of action "if he could help the club." This, it would seem, is a foregone conclusion.

Reay has only seen a few of the players who will be in his charge this season in action but he appeared to think highly of some of the newcomers. He had little doubt of the ability of such veterans as defenseman

About Gordie Cowan and with the puck. And I don't care Tony Schneider, two juniors up from Regina, Pats, and Gene Achymichuk, who played part of last season at Buffalo after a great record in Alberta junior hockey. Reay could only say that all three come highly recommended by Montreal scouts. He also felt that winger Bob Fryday would prove to be a popular player with Victoria fans.

Asked the inevitable questions about Jean Beliveau, hockey's most publicized player, Reay was quite enthusiastic. "He's the best I've ever seen," he said.

The Cougars will be on display for Victoria fans for the first time on September 29, when the New York Rangers will provide the opposition. On October 2, a return game with the Bombers is scheduled here. That, unless other arrangements are made, completes pre-season play. The Cougars open league action at Vancouver on October 6 and play their first home game against New Westminster Royals, on Friday, October 9.

Mrs. Oster was in complete control. Given a three-run lead in the first inning, she gave up six hits in the seven-inning game, struck out three and walked none. Both Vancouver runs came in the second inning and were unearned.

Victoria picked up only six hits but capitalized on three Vancouver errors and six bases on balls.

London Seeks Airport Safety System

LONDON (NANA).—Nine narrow escapes in the air approaching to London in poor visibility during 18 months have led the ministry of civil aviation to try a tighter system of control for an experimental period, beginning next month. It is hoped to be operative at an almost complete standstill against collision in these congested approaches before an accident forces drastic action.

KEPT OUT OF AREA

This class of aircraft, unless radio is carried, is not allowed to fly in the control area in bad visibility. Trouble is liable to arise in marginal visibility and in conditions when the degree of visibility is changing. Then some other captains may elect to fly according to instrument-flight rules and other according to visual-flight rules which mean less close and continuous contact with air traffic control. Given complete control, radar probably can spot the small private plane trespassing in the area and keep in-line clear of it. Air traffic control can certainly keep the lines separated from each other provided the machinery of control does not get overloaded.

During the three-month experiment, in doubtful visibility, captains no longer will be able to choose. They will be given

Importance of Speech Emphasized in School

Speech and its quality is being more and more regarded as a subject of vital importance.

Men and women, boys and girls are judged and placed according to their voice use and speaking. Children as well as adults have their voices adversely affected by the ugly noises to which they listen daily in the street or over the air.

STANDARDS LOWER

People get far too used to standard, raucous nasal throats, and bear them without protest with the result that standards are much lower than they used to be.

Most unpleasant voices are wrongly used. There is today a great need for good voice and speech instruction in combat indifference and neglect. Even in the speaking professions which should set a high standard, educated distinguished speaking among the crew of the Compass Rose, which is the real star of the picture.

Although the wavy-mavy has officially ceased to exist, his greatest hours have been faithfully recorded in the magnificent picture.

Everybody doesn't share the average Victorian's love of the sea. Forty gunners of 129 Anti-Aircraft Battery traveled to the Pacific National Exhibition on HMCS Stou and returned to the city on HMCS Ontario.

TYPICAL OF CREWS

Characters in the epic sea picture are composites of many men. Monsarrat served with them. They are typical of the crews of any corvette flying the White Ensign. Local seamen will recognize many wartime pairs.

"The navy is OK for sailors," the gunners cracked on their return, "but the Pacific is a lot of water—and it's all wet."

Lieut. C. M. West and a contingent of the local anti-aircraft battery thought they were all right while at Wainwright recently. It rained constantly while they were there.

The artillerymen, and local reserve units, took part in exercises "Buffalo IV" at the huge Alberta training centre. The division-scale exercise was the largest ever conducted by the army in peacetime.

Canadian Scottish troops under Major J. Fawcett, operated side-by-side with active force men of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, during the war games.

LEARNED LOT

"We learned a lot about soldiering under actual battle conditions," Major S. E. Park, Scottish training officer, said Saturday. "And we developed an esprit-de-corps which you can't develop on local training."

EXERCISE CRITICIZED

Newspapers in Western Canada weren't so enthusiastic about "Buffalo IV." Mainland papers devoted columns of front-page criticism to the exercise.

Vancouver writers were dismayed that reserve units could turn out only 700 men for the exercise. They want to know what they can see for the billion and a half dollars spent on the army in recent years.

The sad fact is that Canada is getting out of her reserve army the same kind of support that the average citizen is putting into it. And that isn't much, according to the Vancouver papers.

The 5th Area Signal Squadron Cadet Corps will begin fall training at the Signal Centre, Work Point Barracks, Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The cadets have vacancies for boys wishing to learn radio and communications work. Interested boys may report to Signal Centre on Friday or may telephone chief instructor, Capt. J. T. Ross, at B 1320.

STARTS ON TUESDAY

Fall activity commences Tuesday evening for the 5th Regiment trumpet band. Bandmen and their parents are invited to a social evening at the armory at 8 p.m.

Major Brent Murdoch will discuss fall training plans for the band, and refreshments will be served.

Fall training for the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) will commence September 28, according to assistant officers.

The 40th Technical Squadron RCME (Reserve Force) will resume parades on Tuesday evening, September 8. As in the past, the unit will be conducting courses in training, on gun repair and maintenance, welding, machine shop trades and telecommunication (radio).

A further shipment of equipment has been received for the unit bugle and drum. The unit is now looking for an instructor and 14 buglers and drummers.

BADGES OBTAINED

Silver lapel badges in the form of the RCME crest, for wear with civilian clothing, have been obtained and will be presented to those personnel who have qualified for this award.

Young men interested in following the clerical branch of the army are required for orderly room duties, according to WO2 H. B. Smith. Vacancies exist for three clerks and experience is not necessary as they will be trained on the weekly parade night.

Adjustments and New Skills Taught by Sightless Woman

BY KAY McGEORGE

Adjustments with cheerful, grey-haired Dorothy Stark can be an hour learning how to do things sightless people can do. Stark, a field secretary for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, is teaching adjustments and new skills to sightless people. ## Dior-Inspired Fashions Brought Here for Show

BY DEE LAVOIE

None of Christian Dior's ultra new fashions, featuring his controversial "Live Line" have arrived in Canada or the States as yet.

But a local department store has had several outfits made up following the exact lines dictated by Dior's designer. The clothes, two suits and a dress, have been brought here for a fashion show in the Victoria Curling Rink September 9, 10, 11 and 12.

All three show the new Dior silhouette, with slightly bulky fullness at the top and slender skirts coming to just below the knee.

Both the suits are very simply styled, and are cut on rounded lines with gently rippled waists. Bulkiness through the shoulder line is given by dolman sleeves.

The striking dress, made for after-five occasions, has back interest in its trim skirt, given by low-cut unpressed pleats which stand out just a little.

The fall fashion story is told in these Dior-inspired outfits, which illustrate the Paris designer's new "Live Line" and shorter skirts. Doris Usher, left, wears a worsted suit styled on rounded lines with dolman sleeves giving top fullness. On the right, Nona Damaske is pictured in a brown peau de soie cocktail dress, given a wide shoulder line by an artfully draped collar effect. Both skirts are 16 inches from the floor.

That would make any demure late at night. It's fashioned from pure silk.

TIERS OF RUFFLES

The notice is simple but the skirt isn't. It's made up of a dozen tiers, each a ruffle of lace over net with a bit of the net showing at the edge.

With it, you'd likely wear rhinestone jewelry and a red velvet robe (or a real one) pinched at the waist.

Less formal but right for an evening of canasta or for going to the movies, is a dress of navy crinkled rayon.

The novelty gimmick on these is their buttons which are striped at base and white to match the collar and cuffs.

Beauty and You

By MARION MATTHEWS

Today is the second in a series of articles pointing out the importance of skin care for the teenager. Whether you are a sufferer from acne or have just a mild case of getting it at it now may save you from a more serious case later.

Have your own bath essential. Wash your face with soap and water. These all should be kept as scrupulously clean as your face. Remember, state makeup should never be used with a fresh application.

Wash your face thoroughly between each application of cream with a cleansing lotion before you begin an over again. After cleansing your face with the special soap, be sure to use a skin conditioner.

Use lukewarm water on your face. Get used to this splashing for it is simply a wonderful, and as it flings off impurities, follow this with an application of cold water which acts as a mild stimulant locally and helps close pores.

Along with your cleansing program are other aids which can help you achieve and maintain a better complexion. These include diet—which I will take up in more detail tomorrow—and preserving the clean facial skin by not pulling your hands to your face for

Today's Pattern

There are three main findings from the study. First, the mean age of the participants was 16.7 years, which is slightly below the mean age of 17 years of the general population in the United Kingdom. This may be due to the fact that the majority of the participants were from secondary schools, which have a maximum age of 16 years. ## A black and white photograph of a modernist building, identified as the National Bureau of Standards. The building features a flat roof, a series of large, rectangular windows arranged in horizontal bands, and a prominent vertical concrete pillar on the left side. The facade appears to be made of light-colored concrete or stone. The building is set against a dark, possibly wooded background.

Your telephone company's widespread expansion program is rapidly rolling ahead. Eight conversion projects are now in progress—eight projects of great importance amongst the many now underway. Conversion to automatic dial telephones includes building modern central offices as well as installation of complex equipment and miles of wire necessary to bring this swift and accurate service to thousands of subscribers.

1. NEW WESTMINSTER A major part of New Westminster's $5,000,000 conversion program is underway, with construction started on the building which will house the city's automatic equipment.

12. NORTH VANCOUVER: Automatic equipment part of the $2,700,000 conversion program, is being installed in the new central office. Inauguration of service is expected near the beginning of 1954.

3. RICHMOND With the new center office building complete, installation of automatic equipment is in progress. Actual operation is expected by next summer.

4) COVERDALE Operators continued to work while experts moved the present marine exchange to a new site. This prepared the way for construction of the automatic exchange.

S. STEVESTON The new exchange will go into automatic operation at the same time as Richmond. Total cost of the Richmond-Steveston conversion is estimated at $1.2 million.

16 " 8. ALBION BELMONT COLQUITZ: Three modern buildings to house automatic equipment which will replace the existing matrix systems in operation. V-models have been completed. Installation of the compact equipment is underway now, with operation scheduled for early 1984.

This was followed by reports of Soviet intelligence through the activities of other agents and technicians.

the 1970s and 1980s, there has been a growing emphasis on the importance of the environment in the development of the world. This has led to a number of international agreements and conventions, such as the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) in 1992, which resulted in the adoption of the Agenda 21 action plan. This plan sets out a comprehensive framework for sustainable development, which is defined as development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. The plan emphasizes the need for a holistic approach to development, which takes into account the economic, social, and environmental dimensions of human well-being. It also stresses the importance of participation and transparency in the decision-making process, and the need for a global partnership for sustainable development. The plan calls for a number of specific actions, such as the promotion of clean and sustainable technologies, the protection of the environment, and the promotion of social justice and equity. It also calls for a number of institutional arrangements, such as the establishment of a global fund for the environment, and the strengthening of national institutions for sustainable development. The plan is a landmark document in the history of international environmental law, and it has inspired a number of other international agreements and conventions, such as the Kyoto Protocol on climate change and the Convention on Biological Diversity. It remains a key reference point for policymakers and scholars alike, and it continues to shape the global agenda for sustainable development.

CHAPTER 9

We rose late next morning at Base Camp. We were pretty stiff after all our exertions but in the warm sun we soon began to show signs of life. I decided to go and wash and even to shave. It was wonderful to feel clean again and move about at ease in camp boots.

I was able to see things more clearly, pains for the coming struggle were beginning to take shape. This was uppermost in all our minds as we were quite clear from the way the three field glasses in hand, discussed the problems of the ascent.

As for myself I had made up my mind that there was still the question of supplies. On dead with I had every confidence in Nivea and prepared the mountain, at Pukana a long one in advance and after a series of calculations I felt I was prepared. There was no doubt that some of our supplies could be carried in the spiritual of the attack, so I decided to leave our attention with Rebuffat and camp 1 without hurrying and in a few days of work we were determined to make a final attack on the mountain.

IN THE SNOW

After our final weather forecast to start over and on the 7th it was in white. I thought I was who had left Camp 1 early in the morning with two high altitude loads, past 20 pounds of food, intending to make an attempt on camp 2 and about the right time.

When we left at about 5 o'clock it was snowing hard but we were up rapidly and reached camp 1 by nightfall. As usual we packed one of our supplies, now we all were sent. Rebuffat and myself again of our summer camped again, which were very yards from the base of a mountain.

We went at about 10 o'clock for our first attempt on camp 2. Rebuffat and Dawa 2. Neither of them had been in the snow before. The snow was very hard and the mountain was very steep. It was a very difficult climb and we were very tired when we reached camp 2. We were very happy to see the mountain again and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

Rebuffat had stomach pains when he got worse and worse so that in the end we had to take him away from the mountain. We were very tired when we reached camp 2.

Progress was very little. At the end of the day we were very tired and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

At camp 2 we found Terry and Dawa. We had to get off early so as to take advantage of the hardest of the snow about the mountain.

At dawn I began to roll out the sheep. I was very tired and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

Three of us spent the night in as they now went off to the left, snow but they were carefully this day shelter with a and I wanted to pick up the equipment we had dumped on a nylon bag into which you put the first trip. I continued to go on the first trip. I continued to go on the first trip.

The Shompas were very strange. Some afterwards I recognized the shape of a chiseled in the snow. I was very tired and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

There could be no question of re-establishing camp on the slope itself. To the right there was a deep drop to the left a plateau of snow on the central side of which ran the central crest and 50 yards above us a very broken up area began.

Looking at the series on the left I noticed that the crevasses between them were all backed up with fresh snow. An area came away further to the left than the plateau but it took us nearly an hour to reach them. I was very tired and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

IN A CREVASSE
There could be no question of re-establishing camp on the slope itself. To the right there was a deep drop to the left a plateau of snow on the central side of which ran the central crest and 50 yards above us a very broken up area began.

Looking at the series on the left I noticed that the crevasses between them were all backed up with fresh snow. An area came away further to the left than the plateau but it took us nearly an hour to reach them. I was very tired and we were very tired when we reached camp 2.

Lens and Shutter

A Column for the Amateur Photographer

By FRED TANNER

We have tried to explain the operation of the lens and of the shutter with a few camera that help to make your pictures more pleasing from the standpoint of the person seeing them for the first time. It is that simple, only such makes a person like or dislike a scene, or any pose. Of course as your pictures should not be perfect but by following some of the suggestions we have made, they will be better than most.

There is something in the picture of the mountain which is very interesting. The mountain is very high and the snow is very white. The sky is very blue and the clouds are very white. The mountain is very high and the snow is very white. The sky is very blue and the clouds are very white.

NEW YORK (The Associated Press)—The woman who has again divided a field dominated by men. This time it is the field of aviation, a field which has been the province of men since the first flight of the Wright brothers. Amelia Earhart, the first woman to solo the Atlantic, has proved that women can be freed from the role of being a mere passenger.

Tribal Chief Frank Savey

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

AN important West Coast personality spent a week in Victoria recently—Frank Savey, Chief of the Ehattisat Indians; whose village is on Esperanza Inlet and a sub-band of the Nootkas. He is a direct descendant of the Maquinna, that famous old chieftain of Friendly Cove, who several hundred years ago negotiated with Captain Cook and the various Spanish explorers, each claiming Vancouver Island and the adjacent coast of the mainland for their respective governments.

Chief Savey, now 66, was born at Friendly Cove and educated at Christie's Indian Residential school at Kikawas near Tofino. From his physique one can readily appreciate his being the pleted, was then made by canoe. From Nootka to Victoria, then to Steveston, Seattle and Tacoma. Making for the nearest cove or beach when bad weather overtook them, they would haul the canoe high and dry and camp till the seas moderated. Sturdy 30-foot canoes, seldom seen nowadays and requiring several stout pairs of hands to handle them, were used. As each canoe load represented an entire family, should one be swamped a whole family would be lost, but being expert canoe handlers few ever came to grief.

ANNUAL MOVE

Commercial fishing being unknown in those days, with the exception of a few that engaged in fur sealing, hop-picking in the States was their only means

Savey bears testimony to the plain but wholesome diet on which he was raised. Principal items of the family's daily menu included mowich (deer), bear and seal meat. Fresh or dried fish, clams, mussels and for an occasional delicacy, sea eggs. Once in awhile whale meat and berries in season for a dessert. Gold and silver coinage was the only currency the Indians recognized, but having little of it, all the white man's food they could buy was hard tack, flour, tea and sugar. He relates how in those days the trading stores transacted all business through a small wicket, merely large enough to pass the money through and receive the goods in exchange. No one was ever permitted inside the store and the storekeeper invariably kept a loaded rifle handy by his side during transactions.

Their fish was practically all caught in the rivers, various methods being employed such as spearing, traps and weirs. Deer and bear were caught by means of "deadfalls"—a heavily weighted log suspended over the animal's runway and released by an ingeniously contrived trip. To this day the remains of these old deadfalls may be found along the banks of coastal streams. The chief well remembers when his dad had him up long before daybreak and out on such food hunting expeditions. Dressed only in a thin cotton shirt, no pants and barefooted, rain or shine he had to go. Cold meant nothing to them, they had to get food.

OLD MAQUINNA

Frank remembers the advent of the steamers, first the Maude, then the Queen City, the Tees and finally amid great excitement, the coming of the Princess Maquinna; named after his beloved great-grandmother. The Indians became very much attached to the old Maquinna. Until her very last trip a feature for tourist passengers was to watch the young bucks and hazel-eyed belles swarm aboard at every stopping place to purchase magazines, principally detective stories and movie star books.

LOCAL TOPIC

Commenting on local topics the chief didn't appear over enthusiastic about Indians being allowed in beer parlors. He added that his band experienced little trouble with liquor. He was in agreement with the Indians having the vote, family allowance and social security pensions, feeling that such things tended to lessen the prejudice against his people. Dressed in a moderate and well cut pin stripe suit, he expressed amusement at the fancy regalia and head-dresses worn by the dozen so-called Indian chiefs whose pictures so frequently appear. He says their make-up is not typical of the coast Indians but copies from the admittedly more colorful prairie Redskins. Cedar bark hats and bear skin clothing, though perhaps less spectacular, would be more correct in his opinion.

The habit of making every Tom, Dick and Harry that came along a chief never did appeal to the natives of the West Coast. Actually the only honorary white man chief his band ever made was myself. At the same time the chief presented me with a 25-foot totem that still stands in front of the Zeballos post-office. Zeballos, by the way, is situated in the area of Jura, Martin, the Indian carver residing in the Ehattisat; the Zeballos River once being their

Film Business Destined For a Revival This Fall

By HAROLD HEFFERNAN

ALTHOUGH film business throughout the land appears destined for a thumping revival this fall, the big boys in the driver's seat better not sit back and relax.

Cinemascope, wide screens and all the other 3-D illusions hitting the market in full force within a few weeks are not causing Hollywood's dogged rival, Television, to pull its punches even a little bit.

On the contrary, plans are afoot among the TV master minds to uncork a fresh barrage of worries. Their most powerful weapon, of course, will be color and the biggest news of the day concerning it is that it will be available to home viewers long before originally anticipated.

It was learned today that high executives of RCA-NBC are on the ground here surveying the possibility of launching color telecasts with a few of their outstanding live programs resuming in the fall. FCC approval is expected well before January 1, 1954, and in that event NBC wants to be ready with a plan whereby anyone with a receiver adapted for color and most such sets are now owned by experimenters—will be able to get the comedy hour, Bob Hope's new program and chief source of supply of fish and the valley area, game and berries.

While in Victoria Chief Savey and his family were the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hunt, 348 Michigan St. Also spending much of their time at Thunderbird Park, renewing an old acquaintance with Mungo Martin, the Indian carver residing in the Ehattisat; the Zeballos River once being their possibly "This Is Your Life" in the tints. Among other things, the New York representatives are probing the difficult problems connected with makeup. As the color and black-and-white telecasts must go out simultaneously, a happy medium must be reached in daubing up the performers. Color makeup, as proven in motion picture work, is a completely different field, requiring more heavier treatment on the faces of players.

NBC officials here had nothing to say about the new color TV plans, except that "it's our pet baby right now." From confidential sources, however, it was learned that the network may have a coup in the making—one that could drop a fast bombshell in Hollywood's lap. And it might come weeks before January 1—and at the very moment the movie barons had hoped to be reaping sensational returns and renewed public interest through lease of "The Robe" and other eye-filling novelties.

TINY SPARROWS MENACE CROPS IN TANGANYIKA

NAIROBI—Voracious swarms of tiny red-billed sparrows of the northwestern slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro have created a local crisis—they are attacking the last standing food crop in Northern Tanganyika. The birds are as thick as locusts and a farmer who fired two barrels of a shotgun killed 140, and tens of thousands of sparrows were killed. Though the wheat crop is estimated to yield 300,000 tons, it may be almost completely destroyed. The government has promised all possible aid.

Griffins and Harpies...

By CECIL CLARK

THEY don't believe you, those civil servants, when you tell them that the Provincial Library cost more to build than the whole Parliament Buildings. But it's true.

Back in 1897 the Parliament Buildings cost about $300,000; in 1912-15 the library wing added at the rear cost $1,100,000.

You could triple or quadruple these figures today to get the current cost, but it's doubtful if you could get the workmanship.

For the interior of the Provincial Library is without a doubt the finest example of classical architecture in Western Canada.

MAKING MARBLE

When Victor Moretti of Vancouver took charge of its interior decoration he brought craftsmen from Italy to make the hollow marble columns by the 16th century process known as scagliola. With a mixture of Flanders glue, gypsum and wingless the giant columns were fashioned right on the job, then skillfully colored by hand to resemble the natural scaglia limestone.

Superintendent of works Percy Mackereth, veteran of the PWD, remembers the uncommemorative Italian crew working behind canvas sheets to bring about this miracle of old world architecture.

Every year thousands of tourists are systematically shepherded in sightseeing groups through the arches that stand as a monument to Italian craftsmanship.

Little FIGURES

If you stand in the middle of the vast circular ground floor rotunda you look up to a giddy minutes to spare, take a look at the height where the glass cupola the interior of the Provincial Library. It's well worth a visit.

the topmost gallery, you see faces grinning at you. Half beast and half human, these giant white plaster figures seem to relish your surprise. You try to figure out what they are. Then it comes to you. Ranged in a circle round the dome they're alternately harpies and griffins. But the symbolism of their presence takes a little figuring.

The story goes back to olden Troy where, if you remember your Greek mythology, Aeneas and his people went searching for a new home after the fall of the city. Sailing the blue Mediterranean, somewhere between Greece and Italy, they landed on the Island of Harpies.

The harpies were vultures with the heads and bodies of maidens sent by the gods to torment Phineus, whom Jupiter had deprived of his sight in And whenever a meal was placed before Phineus the harpies darted down from the air and carried it off.

THOSE GRIFFINS

Now how this works in with the province's collection of a quarter of a million volumes is a little beyond me. But the other figures, the griffins, seem to fit the scene.

Again according to the early Greeks griffins had the bodies of lions and the heads and wings of eagles. Like birds they built nests, but rather unrealistically laid agate eggs.

However, they always knew where burial treasures lay and kept plunderers at bay. And so it would appear, symbolically, the griffins are there to protect the treasures below them.

Some day when you've a few minutes to spare, take a look at the height where the glass cupola the interior of the Provincial Library. It's well worth a visit.

There's news in neckline treatments in fur this year. A deep, "standaway" neckline is the perfect touch in the fur that is to be worn over an evening decolletage. Black Spice Persian lamb makes this beautifully molded jacket from Teitelbaum.

The influence of the Italian Renaissance is strong in this handsome full-length Persian lamb slashed with black velvet. Ritter complements its straight body lines with great, double puffed sleeves, an up-standing "gallery" collar.

The wrapped silhouette, so new in designer cloth coats, makes fur news as well. Teitelbaum shows it in lush, bluish-brown Matara Alaska seal skin. Only jeweled cuff ornaments and the deep glow of the fur itself relieve the stark simplicity of the lines.

Slenderizing Fur Silhouettes With Newsy Collar Treatment

By MARIAN RAHL

A FUR coat is usually a big investment and it should be carefully planned so that it fits your budget, your way of life and your figure. Let its color flatter your complexion, too, shade right up to beige, the many greys and black. Your fur coat may be high style or modified and easy to wear; it may be full length or in one of the many jacket lengths. There's a variety and simplicity in furs as there is in all good fashions for fall and winter, 1953.

The column silhouette is one that flatters all figures. Slim throughout with flat back and side case, it has sufficient fullness to wrap the coat in front. It is seen with side slits at the hemline, mandarin tailored collars and a smooth line with fullness above the bosom and its soft breadth at the shoulders is a high style trend worth watching. Deft manipulation of pelts will achieve a wider line at the top of the silhouette in puffed shoulders, luxurious sleeves with bloused, puffed and beautifully darted effects.

Care in Eating Habits Will Help the Aging

AGING people are the products of the life they have lived, points out Margaret E. Smith, Ph.D., M.Sc., director of nutrition for the Health League of Canada. If a sound state of health has been maintained for the first 60 years, people have little reason to be anxious about the next 40 years.

"Health is the sum total of what a person has been eating daily throughout his life," notes Miss Smith. "Paediatrics, the study of children, and geriatrics, the study of the aging, really have a great deal in common. The care of both young and old should strive for mental and emotional balance with optional nutrition to protect them against disease."

Moderation should be the rule, because of excess of food as well as a deficiency is injurious. It has been found by careful study that the same amount of food given in smaller amounts and oftener—five or six times per day instead of three—is conducive to better health in the aged.

PRINCESS LINE

The Empire influence shows up in a shaped, loose coat with new high feeling in subtle shaping above the normal waist. Actually, it is a modified princess line, sometimes with the back fullness caught and held by a half belt. It is an excellent style for the slim figure of any height.

Your fur coat may have a newsy neckline—the gallery collar stands in a rim about the open neckline, which is cut away from the neck. Also flaunting the soft warmth of fur is the coat with deep open neckline. There's the dramatic collar that stands up, the elegant neckline and the many small collar shapes that are so easy to wear. Sleeves are soft and feminine and contribute to the silhouette by tapering in narrow lines—or they are puffed and full.

Scientific breeding processes and dyeing create beautiful pelts in many lines. Southwest African Persian lamb makes fashion news this year in "brown spile," a true lasting brown. In "black spile," its lustre gleams in patterned rosettes and varied curls. The great beauty of Alaska seal skin, a fur which is protected by the United States government, is found in three colors—black, Matara (a soft brown with a blue undertone) and Safari (a muted copper shade).

PALEST TONES

Pale beige tones are found in many different furs that have been sheared or clipped and blended or dyed such as racoon, beaver, muskrat and nutria. In the brown family the rarest and loveliest color can be found in nature's own Labrador, Easter Quebec or natural wild mink.

Remember the wisdom of buying the best grade fur you can afford—it is better to choose the finest quality in your price range than buy a poor quality of fur which you have always desired!

With the new interest in different coat lengths, the fur jacket will win even more enthusiasts this year. Lengths are from 24 inches to 28 inches and three-quarter coats range from 30 to 36 inches. A flat fur is a wonderful choice for the shorter coat.

These brief garments encompass all the style and silhouette interest found in full-length versions. Many are trimmed with a second fur.

Men, not women, wear veils among the Tuareg tribes of the central and western Sahara. Night and day the male nomads wear long cloths wound around head and face, leaving exposed only the eyes and tip of the nose.

The Pacific Ocean extends eastward to the longitude of Portland, Maine. If a seaplane took off at Portland and flew due south it could land in the Pacific off Iquique, Chile.

school championship athlete of his time. He played coronet in the school band. Since leaving school, like the majority of West Coast Indians, he has followed the occupation of a commercial fisherman.

VISIT TO CITY

Accompanied by his wife and three orphaned grandchildren, their primary reason for visiting Victoria being to permit the children to see something of the sights of city life and the outside world generally. They also visited Vancouver and Seattle. Asked what impressed them most, the children unanimously voted for television and the escalators in the department stores.

Both the chief and his wife commented on present day means of transportation. By the time they return home they will have traveled by plane, steamer, train bus and taxi. Sixty years ago, as small children, they used to accompany their parents on hop-picking expeditions to Tacoma. The identical 600-mile round trip they have just completing, was then made by canoe. From Nootka to Victoria, then to Steveston, Seattle and Tacoma. Making for the nearest cove or beach when bad weather overtook them, they would haul the canoe high and dry and camp till the seas moderated. Sturdy 30-foot canoes, seldom seen nowadays and requiring several stout pairs of hands to handle them, were used. As each canoe load represented an entire family, should one be swamped a whole family would be lost, but being expert canoe handlers few ever came to grief.

Savey's father was a noted seal hunter. As a boy Frank recalls the summers when his dad went off seal hunting instead of hop-picking. Victoria based sealing schooners picked up their Indian hunters at Nootka and other West Coast points. A-way for two or three months the men sometimes took their wives along with them, signing on as hunters like their husbands. Children were left behind in the care of relatives. The hunters made money. Two to a canoe they received $1 per seal, or 50 cents each.

WILLIAM King Bull was one of those early-day Victorians who moved through the local scene for years; prominent, well thought of, an adventuresome soul, a bit of a poet, who turned his hand to many jobs and then went away. There were many like him, their names unknown today, but they were interesting folk, characters of the days in which they lived.

Mr. Bull was a businessman of sorts, but it's evident today that he much preferred to talk and to write. He was a tremendous writer of letters to the editor, long letters on every subject under the sun. He wrote about the Bible, the glories of the British Empire, the shortcomings, as he saw them, of community life in Victoria. He loved to give lectures, and often hired a hall for that purpose and did exceedingly well. Yes, Mr. W. K. Bull was widely known in his day. Unfortunately, there is no picture of him, so we cannot tell what he looked like.

AN AUCTIONEER

First mention of him in The Colonist was this, Feb. 5 of 1864: "Another Knight of the Hammer—By our advertising columns we observe that Mr. W. K. Bull of the Beehive Store, Fort Street, is about to commence business as an auctioneer, and that his first sale of general merchandise will take place at his auction rooms, the Beehive, Fort Street, on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock."

We do not know today how well Mr. Bull did as auctioneer. But he did find time to give his lectures. He had traveled in the South Seas and in Australia and New Zealand and clearly loved to talk of his adventures.

We read of one lecture in The Colonist of Nov. 21, 1865: "The interesting lecture delivered on Friday evening last by Mr. W. K. Bull to a numerous assembly of the members of the Mechanics' Institute on his trip from Melbourne to Tahiti and other islands of the South Seas is deserving of more than passing notice. The lecturer gave a very glowing representation of the charms of those islands generally, but more especially of Tahiti which he spoke of as carrying off the palm for loveliness and beauty."

Very little is known of Mr. Bull's family, but this appeared in The Colonist of April 10, 1867: "Missing Child—Last evening, Willie, son of Mr. W. K. Bull, aged six and a half years, was missed from home; after a long search, several hours 'crying' of his description through the town, and a vigorous dragging of the water in the vicinity of Nathan's Wharf, the little fellow was found curled up under a table in front of his father's store fast asleep. Mr. Bull was aided in the search by many kind friends."

GUEST SPEAKER

Mr. Bull took part in every community activity during the years he lived here and they were many. He must have been in his glory the Queen's Birthday celebration of 1867, for he was the guest speaker. Let us look into The Colonist for a picturesque and colorful description of this great event: "On the morning of the Queen's Birthday, about 200 citizens of Victoria wended their way to the Isobel, which, with steam up, lay at Brodick's Wharf, and about half-past eight o'clock she quitted her fastenings amid the fluttering of bunting and the inspiring strains of the Volunteer Band, whilst many lingering, wistful glances were cast at her by those assembled to see her off, whose engagements precluded their accompanying that happy throng.

"Passing HMS Shearwater, which lay in the harbor, decked like a bride on her wedding morning, the band struck up the National Anthem, the uncovered heads of the passengers showing that our Sovereign possesses all the loyalty of many, and the respect of all."

"The noble vessel, notwithstanding the adverse wind and tide, sped swiftly along. In homeward to a somewhat stiff wind, many ladies retired to the elegant saloon, whilst other fair ones chose to brave the breeze and in the giddy mazes of the dance, overcome the chills of Boreas."

"Two hours' steaming and the Isobel dropped anchor in the beautiful harbor of San Juan Island."

"All having landed, many formed picnics in the embosomed bowers of this favored spot. A capital free lunch, with the best of 'roast and boiled' was provided by the generous hearted military who seemed to derive pleasure in proportion to the appetites of their guests."

"The table spread was that of their regular mess, a copious supply of beer from one of our island breweries was on hand, so, to the gastronomic epicure, a soldier's life indeed has charms."

NATIONAL DAY

"The following patriotic address was delivered by Mr. W. K. Bull: 'I have much pleasure in coming forward on this occasion on behalf of the Mechanics' Institute and the excursionists generally to express our heartfelt thanks to Capt. Bazalgette, and the soldiers of the Garrison for their kindness in having contributed so abundantly to our happiness and amusement on this, our national holiday.'"

"The last accounts from England show that our beloved Queen is gradually recovering her composure from her late crushing bereavement, and is in the enjoyment of satisfactory health, and as to dear old England, 'whose flag has braved a thousand years, the battle and the breeze,' she holds the same glorious position as ever—feared abroad and respected at home; but when speaking in this enthusiastic manner of my country, I am sometimes taken to task with the observation of 'Sir, you greatly overrate the importance of your country, she only seems to you of so much consequence because regarded through the inflated medium of national vanity.'"

"If there be any truth in this charge of undue exaltation and over-estimation of the importance of my country, how comes it to pass that when matters of great pith and moment occur in any part of the world all eyes are turned at once upon England, and so much solicitude is evinced to know what might be the opinion of John Bull upon the matter..."

"And so on, and on and on went William King Bull's talk in praise of John Bull, and we may judge it was a great success."

OFF TO OLYMPIA

A few years later Mr. Bull tired of life in Victoria, and decided to live in Washington Territory. He chose Olympia. The Colonist of May 18, 1871, noted: "At Olympia—Mr. W. K. Bull, the Busy Bee of the Fort Street Beehive, is managing a large mercantile house at Olympia, W.T."

But soon Mr. Bull tired of Olympia and yearned to be back in Victoria: Oct. 17, 1871: "Coming Back—W. K. Bull, Esq., formerly a resident of Victoria and now at Olympia is coming back to settle amongst us once more. Mr. Bull was one of our most intelligent and energetic citizens, and his host of friends will be glad to welcome him and encourage his efforts to re-establish himself here."

However, it was a good many months before Mr. Bull arrived back in Victoria—April 12, 1872: "Returned to Us—W. K. Bull, Esq., one of our early pioneers and a most valued citizen returned by yesterday's North Pacific to settle permanently amongst us. He is welcome, and there is room for many more of the same energetic material of which Mr. Bull is made."

A few years later Mr. Bull was lecturing once more: "The lecture room at the Mechanics' Institute was crowded last evening to hear Mr. W. K. Bull's lecture on Australia—Mr. James Fell, in the absence of the president of the Institute, took the chair, and introduced the lecturer."

"After a recess of five minutes, Mr. Bull recited a piece from Longfellow, with great precision and dramatic effect, calling forth loud applause from the audience who, one and all, seemed well pleased with the evening's entertainment."

A versatile man was William King Bull!

GOVERNMENT JOB

Mr. Bull evidently did not reopen his Beehive crockery store, but took a variety of positions as clerk.

In 1883 we read: "Appointment—Mr. W. K. Bull of this city has been appointed collector under the Provincial Revenue Act for the electoral district of Victoria."

And he held a job at City Hall, too, as we see in May of 1894: "Mr. W. K. Bull, who has ever since the incorporation of Victoria in 1862 held the position of returning officer for the city, has presented to the Mayor's room at City Hall a fine photograph of himself and a handsome lithograph of the city of Victoria as it appeared in 1860. At the council meeting last evening, Ald. Dwyer called attention to the gifts and a motion was passed thanking Mr. Bull for his kindness."

Mr. Bull's name appears frequently in The Colonist until 1897, mostly as the writer of letters-to-the-editor on practically any subject you might care to mention. Then he fades from the Victoria scene.

Some Loony Things in Libraries

BY JERRY KLEIN

North American Newspaper Alliance

STRANGE things happen at the Brooklyn Public Library. A library employee, checking through the records, found that a book entitled "People Named Smith," written by H. Allen Smith, had been taken out by Mrs. Helen Smith. To top things off, Mrs. Smith lives on Smith Street.

Another fluke occurred at the Brooklyn Library not long ago, when a man returned a book that was overdue 18 years. He apologized for his forgetfulness. The book was called "We Forget Because We Must."

A book titled "How To Train a Dog" was returned to the Brooklyn Library badly chewed. The borrower explained that his dog had beaten him to the chapter on how to stop a dog from chewing.

But Brooklyn isn't the only place where loony things happen at the library.

BOOTING IT

In Orono, Me., a University of Maine professor asked for Victor Hugo's novel, "Notre Dame de Paris." What the library gave him was a book called "Notre Dame: The T Formation."

The prison library in Cleveland got a request for a book from a convict, but refused to lend it to him. The prisoner wanted to curl up with "The Greatest Prison Breaks of All Time."

Another culprit was seized just as he was about to steal a book from a Los Angeles department store. The title of the book being taken was "Alcatraz Prison and the Men Who Live There."

For some strange reason, the library at Melbourne, Australia, says its most popular American book is The Manhattan telephone directory. Not much of a piol, but what a cast!

And in Toledo, the library received a book six weeks' overdue. The book was "The Art of Rapid Reading."

However, late returns don't plague municipal libraries only. Even governments can be careless about returning books.

For instance, over a year ago Iran borrowed from the British embassy library in Teheran a book titled, "Protocol to be Observed on the Severance of Diplomatic Relations."

Apparently, the book came in handy, for soon afterward Iran did break off relations with Britain. The embassy library recently reminded Iran to return the long-due book. But the Iranian foreign office mysteriously replied:

"We're terribly sorry, but we can not return the book immediately. We are still using it."

HE ATE 'EM

King Menelik of Ethiopia wasn't much for returning books, either. In his later years, he took to ripping out pages and eating them. A liberal believer in the beneficial property lik died as the result of stuffing himself with the Book of Kings from a heavy Egyptian edition of the Old Testament.

Thousands of Bibles disappear every year from hotel rooms, where they were placed by the Gideons, and never return. But the religious organization doesn't mind.

In the last 45 years, about 20,000,000 Bibles have been given away by the Gideons. But they're still printing about 8,000 more every week, fully mindful that many of the good books will wind up in travelers' luggage.

A MISTAKE IN TIMING

One of the very few people whom the ailing French Communist leader Maurice Thorez has consented to see after his return from the Soviet paradise is his old friend Pablo Picasso.

In their conversation they naturally touched upon the subject of the bitter criticism to which Picasso's portrait of Stalin has been subjected. The surrealist painter was most unhappy.

"If I only knew what was wrong with that painting I...," "I'll tell you what was wrong," Thorez told him with a grin. "It was your timing. If you had only waited a week longer, nobody would have even been interested in a portrait of Stalin."

The Biggest (Little) Fair on the Island

By C. V. FAULKNER

ON September 10 the sprawling arms of the big maple tree in Duncan's fair grounds will welcome visitors to the 85th annual exhibition to be held in the Cowichan Valley. Sparked by a powerful executive force drawn from every sector of the community, the bustling three-day event has earned the distinction of being the only Class "B" fair on Vancouver Island, and with Armstrong and Chilliwack, one of only three "B" fairs licensed in British Columbia. It all started back in 1868, at another fair grounds under a tree with more sinister implications.

The first Cowichan Fair took place on Wednesday, October 14, 1868, under "Hangman's Tree," located in a field near St. Peter's Church, Maple Bay Road. It was held under the auspices of Archdeacon Reece in conjunction with the annual Harvest Home Thanksgiving of St. Peter's. For the better part of a year the good man had been organizing "something in the way of an agricultural society." That first fair was to see a society firmly established.

AFTER SERVICE

After divine service in the church a crowd of about 200 persons repaired to the fair grounds to view the exhibits. Local judges were appointed for the livestock, grain, vegetable and fruit classes and first, second and third prizes awarded. The prize list contained several familiar names such as Duncan, Mariner and Drinkwater, which are perpetuated in Valley place names today.

The event "caused quite an excitement in this otherwise quiet settlement," reported the British Colonist six days later. That same write-up describes the repeat put on at the Fairsonage for the hungry fairgoers as "a sumptuous lunch, tastefully laid out." It was "on the house," too, which made it all the better.

Some reports have it that prize money awards were made in pounds, shillings and pence. Biggest prize of the event, however, was the official birth of the Cowichan Agricultural Society which has championed the cause of agriculture in the Valley ever since.

Access to Cowichan in those days was by boat to Maple Bay. The society decided to move there and hold their annual event in conjunction with that of the Salt Spring Island people. A hall was built at the bay and for about 10 years a joint exhibition was held under the name of the Cowichan and Salt Spring Island Fair.

ON THE RESERVE

James Dunsmuir's projected railway from Esquimalt to Nanaimo probably dictated the society's next move. This time the fair was located on a piece of Indian Reserve land at Duncan in the heart of the lower Cowichan Valley, where the exhibition is now held. And this is where our old friend the maple tree came into the picture.

One of the society's first projects was to build a small hall on the new site. When the building was completed a young maple was planted in honor of the occasion. Both the fair and the tree have far outstripped their original dimensions. Left fair by building one of the behind in the race, but still a part of the fair, the hall now forms a wing of the old armory which lies some distance behind the building that houses the main exhibits today.

Plans for the present agricultural hall were drawn up in 1912. A bond issue floated to finance the deal was enthusiastically supported by the public, and work got under way the following year. Unfortunately for the society, completion of their hall coincided with the start of First World War and it was turned over to the army for the duration. After the war, however, it housed the annual fair continuously until called for its second term of army duty in 1940—a two-war veteran with a distinguished record of service.

BUILDING UP

Growing pains again attacked the Cowichan Fair in the booming postwar years which followed VE day. By 1948 the society decided their annual event had become too big for them to handle alone. In the words of W. S. (Bill) Sharp, present exhibition secretary-manager, "It had to either go up or down."

For the society there was only one answer—it had to go up. A special fair board was organized under the name of the Cowichan Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition Board, designed to be as nearly representative of the whole Valley as possible. This association was to contain two members from every service club, society, or group in the area. Each pair would be appointed for a two-year term by the organization they represented. First president of the new exhibition body was J. A. F. Mutter, then president of the Cowichan Agricultural Society.

With the new machinery installed, it was now time to pay some attention to the chassis. It was decided that, if possible, the fair itself would be raised from a Class "C" to a Class "B" rating. This would require a bit of doing.

Applications for a "B" fair must first win approval of the provincial government, which in turn recommends to the federal body that a "B" class be awarded. To qualify, an exhibition must have a good management record, and for three years previous to the application have paid annual prize money to the tune of $3,000 in the "utility" classes alone. The latter includes livestock, field crops and vegetables, but not light horses, photographs, or exhibits of that nature.

GRANT-IN-AID

Class "B" rating brings a few financial "plums" in the form of grants from the two governments. Federal assistance is geared to the cost of improvements undertaken each year by the fair itself. The government will pay one-half the cost of new construction up to a limit of $1,800. Additional grants are obtained for 411 work and judges' fees. Class "B" ratings are not easily come by—the year Cowichan received its Class "B" only three were awarded in Canada out of over 50 applications.

(Since the decision to "go up" the Duncan exhibition has made spectacular gains. In the livestock classes alone exhibits have increased about 100 per cent. Over the past three years stabling has been erected for 200 additional head of cattle, plus new sheep and swine pens. Not long ago the association the tree have far outstripped their original dimensions. Left fair by building one of the finest light horse show rings in the province. Since 1860 these expenditures have totaled over $10,000.

Biggest part of the exhibition improvement work has been done by volunteers from the various clubs, lodges and other organizations. Each year a shield is presented to the group donating the greatest number of man-hours. In 1952 the award went to Duncan's Moose Lodge for some 200 man-hours provided out of a total of 700.

FAIR MANAGER

President of the exhibition this year is George Evans, member of a pioneer Valley family that participated in the early Maple Bay fairs. He is assisted by 68 directors, representing over 20 district and Island organizations. Fourteen experts will pass judgment on exhibits ranging from all livestock classes to field products, district exhibits and fancy work.

The judges will include federal and provincial agricultural officials, successful farmers and professional gardeners. Domestic science and fancy work will be passed on by two members of the Vancouver Province's model kitchen. Prize money pie to be served by these pundits will total nearly $7,500. The largest slice (over half of it, in fact) will go to the livestock classes, which represent the dominant factor in the Valley's agricultural economy.

Main effort of the exhibition's entertainment committee this year is concentrated on bringing in a rodeo and stampee, complete with a hundred head of bucking and riding stock. Billed as the largest rodeo to ever play on Vancouver Island, the show will feature bronco riding, steer decorating, wild-cow milking and a wild west parade through the streets of Duncan.

BUDGET EXPANDS

This project has taxed the association's budget and volunteer construction force to the limit. They must provide a 250-foot by 150-foot rodeo arena, complete with chutes and canals, topped with a 324-foot-long grandstand containing 13 tiers of seats which will accommodate an estimated 2,800 people. But that's only half the construction story. Increased livestock listings called for additional stabling for 75 head, new sheep and swine pens, and a new livestock show ring containing three separate rings so that three different breeds may be shown at one time.

Since Archdeacon Reece's first fair years ago the Cowichan Exhibition has remained essentially an agricultural show. Over 20 industrial exhibits were included in 1952 but the number will probably be reduced this year because the rising needs of agriculture have beggared the grounds of space.

The British Colonist of October 20, 1868, was probably more prophetic than it knew when it blessed that first exhibition with these words: "We trust that a grand stride will be made in developing the agricultural interests of this flourishing settlement."

The city of Capetown, South Africa, almost literally grew from a package of seeds. Remembering that vegetables from a salvaged seed packet had saved castaways there in 1617, the Dutch East India Company founded a colony in 1652 to raise fresh food for passing ships.

Trieste Rally Grows

Thousands Go To Hear Tito

TRIESTE (AP)—Yugoslavs in the thousands, by flag-bedecked buses and trains, were pouring into the tiny village of Okrajaglica Saturday night to hear President Tito make his much-heralded declaration on the flaming Trieste issue.

The Yugoslav president speaks Sunday on the dispute with Italy over the future of this free territory which both nations claim. His foreign ministry has peppered Rome all week with diplomatic protests against armed demonstrations along the frontier, and has threatened reprisals.

In contrast to the sizzling notes, there was an outward display of order Saturday night on both sides of the frontier, which splits the town of Gorizia, five miles west of Okrajaglica and 25 miles north of Trieste itself. Here Tito has set the scene for his oration.

On the Yugoslav side there was almost a festival air as the tide of travelers poured through Gorizia railway junction from north and south. The flow of special trains and buses was expected to continue all night.

On the Italian side there appeared to be little excitement and no great evidence of popular concern, despite a week of diplomatic bickering between the two countries.

MOVEMENT CHARGED

Yugoslavia has charged that Italy rushed three divisions to the border area last week end as a show of force under a pretense of fear that Yugoslavia intended to annex her occupation zone of Trieste.

Zone B is occupied by 5,000 Yugoslav troops under the 1947 Italian peace treaty. Zone A is occupied by British and American forces.

Carabinieri and police along the Italian side of Gorizia seemed to have been reinforced to assure order but there were no soldiers in evidence.

Yugoslavia, in her fourth diplomatic note in three days, Friday, threatened to march troops to the frontier unless Italy withdrew her forces from border areas.

Exchange Report Challenged by UN

PANMUNJOM (AP)—The Communists returned 111 U.S.

prisoners Sunday on the final day of exchanges and said all Allied repatriates willing to go home had been sent back.

The statement was immediately challenged by a UN command spokesman who said a preliminary check did not show that jet ace Capt. Harold Fischer, Jr., had been returned.

Captain Fischer failed to return from a flight April 7 on his 70th Sabre jet mission. Two days later Peiping radio said the young pilot was captured after he had been shot down in a dogfight over Manchuria.

The UN command spokesman said 111 Americans were returned Sunday, although the Communists had promised only 110.

The exchange involved 88,000 Communist and Allied prisoners. Among the last 111 Americans released were a handful of fliers the Reds alleged had "confessed" to germ warfare. The U.S. state department had long since denounced the "confessions" as obtained by torture.

Also returned without previous announcement were the crew members of a B-29 Superfort who had been interned in Red China.

It is hoped that the arrangements, which may be concluded before the end of the month, will provide that the quarters will be constructed by the French and Germans under Canadian supervision.

Construction is likely to be financed as part of the NATO agreement or, in the case of Germany, out of reparations.

A stipulation concerning the movement of Canadian families to Europe is that the men must be able to find suitable accommodation.

In several areas where the Canadians are to be stationed, however, such as Soest in Germany, this is virtually impossible.

The same difficulty would face the families of air force men stationed at Zweibruck and Baden-Soellingen in Germany and Gros Tenquin in France. At some of these stations, families are now living in rented trailers brought over from England.

Lenient British Navy Orders Deserter Freed

Hopes Bright for Hughes To Make Home in Canada

VANCOUVER (CP)—The big gamble has paid off and Ivor Hughes, 35, of Dolgelly, Wales, wartime deserter from the Royal Navy, is a free man.

He was released Saturday from HMCS Discovery, on orders from the navy he deserted at Capetown in 1941.

A swift interview with immigration officials followed—he is in Canada illegally—and he was turned loose.

Hughes must report back to immigration September 16, but an official source who asked that he not be named said: "It looks as if he is going to be allowed to stay."

It took just a week to wind up the story which began 12 years ago when Signaller Ivor Hughes deserted in South Africa.

He "ceased to exist" in 1941 when a "Pte. Alan Medd" enlisted with a "South African" army unit and fought with that unit through North Africa and Italy.

It was as Alan Medd—the name of a schoolboy friend—that he was discharged in 1946 and worked for two years in the gold fields and copper mines of Africa.

And it was again Alan Medd who sailed from Capetown in 1948 for Montreal, where he jumped ship and again enlisted. "Pte. Alan Medd" again went to war, this time with the Royal Canadian Regiment in Korea. He was discharged last May in Vancouver.

He worked on the aluminum project at Kemano, B.C., until last Sunday. Then Alan Medd came back to Vancouver and took up the name Ivor Hughes, once more.

He assumed his rightful name by giving himself up to police as "Ivor Hughes, deserter." The crime carries a maximum penalty of death, but Hughes said: "All I want is my own name back."

It was learned Saturday that the Royal Navy, which ordered his immediate release after scanning his records, would issue him a "protective certificate" to show that his name had been cleared.

West Germans Voting Today

BOONN, Germany (AP)—Europe's most crucial election campaign, since the Second World War ended Saturday night, leaving West German voters to decide Sunday whether they rearm with the West or seek neutrality in the cold war.

The 33,000,000-strong electorate will give its answer in voting for a new 484-member Bundestag, parliament's lower house.

West Germany is the big prize in the East-West struggle and the United States and Russia have openly intervened in the bitter campaign.

In a virtually unprecedented move in recent American diplomacy, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles gave a forthright endorsement to stern old Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, Christian Democratic leader, who has headed a middle-road pro-Western government for the past four years.

His Socialist foes immediately dubbed Adenauer an American puppet and hoped that Dulles' endorsement would prove a political "kiss of death."

Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov, determined to wreck Adenauer's program of German cooperation with the United States and West Europe, called for the chancellor's defeat.

Adenauer's main opposition is the strong Socialist party, which wants to block any German alliance with the West and pursue an independent German policy in the cold war.

Like Adenauer, the Socialists are staunchly anti-Communist but they have played the lure of a united Germany without rearmament before the war-weary German people.

Dulles will fly to Denver late Sunday to confer with the President.

Murray Snyder, assistant White House press secretary, termed "completely untrue" a published report that Mr. Eisenhower was "gravely concerned" about Dulles' endorsement earlier this week concerning the German voting and Trieste.

Snyder said that Dulles arranged the meeting with the president before his controversial remarks were made.

Officials at Guided Missile Centre in Australia Courteous but Cautious

ADELAIDE, South Australia (Reuters)—They are courteous but cautious at Salisbury, 15 miles north of here, where guided missiles are made.

Actually, there are two Salisburys.

First, there is the village, where all may come and go as aviation experts and researchers, and the most highly skilled technicians and artisans, join forces to perfect the long-range weapons which Britain and Australia make and test jointly.

And one thing here that the controlling authorities appear to pride themselves upon is the smoothness of their handling of visiting laymen.

Entry to "the establishment" is guarded. The caller states the name of the person he wishes to see and the nature of his business. If his visit is proved legitimate, the caller is escorted to where he is to go and, after the business is transacted, he is escorted out. But scientists and department heads at "the establishment" do not make statements for outside consumption.

They are concerned with their electronic apparatus, cathode ray screens with their weird patterns of motion, intricate draftingmen, administrators and general staff.

Almost every week, British scientists and technicians arrive at Salisbury and at Woomera itself, 300 miles away in the desert.

One thing apparent to all who go to "the establishment" is the airport now being built at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

No one has said so but it just could be that Britain's atomic bomb or bombs for testing somewhere within the 80,000 square miles of prohibited Woomera area next October have already been landed there.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM A. HILLS

In Canada, religious communities have come to look upon the Sunday preceding Labor Day as a kind of unofficial holy day dedicated to the working man. In this observance, they are blessed by the spirit of Christ Jesus, who was known to his contemporaries as "the carpenter."

But Labor Sunday also gives us an opportunity to be also cognizant of the fact that in classical socialism there is an anti-clerical bias. Have these tensions been carried over into the modern labor movement? If they have, consequently, impulsive and unreflective action on the part of any Christian body or of its members, vis-a-vis labor, is at once futile and not a little dangerous.

One of the greatest Archbishops of Canterbury was the late Dr. William Temple. He was respected beyond the borders of his own communion for his intellectual stature and his philosophic insight. His sympathy towards the economic and social problems faced by the modern worker was open and unashamed.

He it was who chided a somewhat hasty pronouncement of a minor church committee on social affairs with the pungent remark: "It is half-baked reflection which is most perilous."

Alas! We have been guilty of it.

Labor Day is something more than a holiday for, as a day dedicated to labor and industry, it reminds us of the fact that the opportunity, the ability, and the desire to work is a trilogy of heavenly benediction.

The observance of this day gives labor its rightful place in the economy of money and machines. It proclaims the dignity and the importance of labor in the national life of Canada.

But let us ask an important question. Where does that great body of ordinary men and women, grouped beneath the banner of labor, stand with respect to the religious life of this Dominion?

I cannot accept that doctrine. It is true that Christ did place primary importance upon the spirit, but I cannot believe that the Son of God who went about healing the sick and feeding the 5,000 denied the material claims of man.

The objects of labor and the Church are the same. Each wants a better world. Although their methods of attaining that world may appear to be different, it is not about time that, under the one Eternal Father, they joined their hands in fraternal association to bring this about. Each could do the other a lot of good.

Garden Notes

Geraniums Keep Through Winter

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS
Questions and Answers

Geraniums in Winter. D.M.H., Victoria.—If you have only a few geraniums in the garden, they may be potted up, cut back hard, window ledge, keeping the soil a little on the dry side.

If you have too many plants to treat them as house plants, dig them up about the end of October and plant them close together in boxes of soil, cutting the plants back to four-inch stubs. The boxes may be kept in a frost-free basement through the winter. The soil should be not quite dry, but almost.

Cuttings are best taken in early September, although the geranium slips root quite easily any time of the year. Select young, short-jointed growths from three to five inches long, and insert them around the edge of a flower pot filled with very sandy soil.

LARGER POTS. When well rooted, pot them up into three-inch pots singly, using a mixture of two parts loam to one part coarse sand, with a little leaf mold or shredded cow manure added, together with a sprinkling of bone meal. Re-pot into five-inch pots in late February or early March, where they may remain until planted out in the garden in May. Water sparingly, as the geranium is very subject to stem rot in winter.

Last Lament for Flies Follows Extermination

TOKYO (NANA).—In Hiroshima one-time camp of the British Commonwealth occupation forces in Japan—a Buddhist memorial service has been held for "the repose of the souls of 2,000,000 departed flies."

The flies were killed in a recent sanitation drive to make Hiroshima "the town without a fly."

BELGRADE (Reuters).—Two Yugoslavs were sentenced Saturday to death at Leskovac in Serbia for spying for Bulgaria. The prosecution alleged Milan Nedelovic and Obren Ratkovic were spies and "diversionists" who had several times crossed into Yugoslavia from Bulgaria to gather military, political and economic information.

"Dear flies: We always wish to live amicably with all creatures in the world. It is therefore regretted that you do nothing but harm to mankind and that we must, in consequence, exterminate you. Pray have no rancor against us for killing you, but accept in many resignation, the inevitable consequence of being born flies."

North B.C. Spruce Grouse Looks Like Franklin Species

BY C. J. GUIGUET
Provincial Museum Biologist

The spruce grouse, more often called spruce partridge, is a forest dwelling bird confined in British Columbia to the extreme northern part of the province. An eastern race occupies the Peace River parkland area and a western form occurs in the northwest from Athol Lake south to Telegraph Creek. There are no apparent field differences in these races, but the spruce grouse is likely to be confused with the Franklin grouse which occurs from the southern boreal forest areas, through the sub-alpine and Columbia forest regions south, at higher altitudes into northern Oregon.

SMALL GROUSE

The spruce partridge is a small grouse measuring about 15 inches long. The male plumage is predominantly black and grey, broken on the flanks by white markings. The tip of the tail in this species carries a rusty, ochraceous band, and the upper tail coverts are usually without white tips, although this character is sometimes found in the northwestern birds.

The spruce partridge, however, never has white at the tip of the tail, and this feature is the main criterion in separating the species under discussion from the more widely dispersed and better known Franklin grouse. The tail of the Franklin grouse is usually jet black to the tips, and the upper tail coverts terminate in a broad white band.

Females of both species are irregular barred in browns, greys and black and are more difficult to separate than are the males. However, what has been said of the former's tail applies to the hens as well, though sometimes the differences are not so apparent.

Spruce grouse nest on the ground, usually under a low branch of spruce or bracken. The nest is generally a slight depression in the moss lined with dead leaves and grass.

The hen lays from 10 to 16 beautifully marked eggs, said to be the most beautiful laid by the grouse family. They have a pinkish or buffy ground color and are strongly marked with spots and blotches of rich russet-brown.

The young are precocial, running with the mother almost as soon as they dry off after hatching. At this time they eat many insects, but the older birds live largely upon the buds and needles of spruce, augmenting that diet in the summer with whatever berries may occur.

COURTSHIP DISPLAY

The courtship display of the male spruce partridge is elaborate and very similar to that of Franklin grouse, which will be illustrated and described next week. In the meantime local bird watchers need worry little over misidentification, for neither of these species occurs on Vancouver Island, and any small dark spruce-inhabiting grouse seen at these latitudes on the Mainland will certainly be Franklin grouse.

Well Known Here

John Plant of RCAF Key Figure in NATO

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (CP).—The top brass comes and goes in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but Air Vice-Marshal John L. Plant of the RCAF stays on as the "prime mover."

The Welsh-born Canadian, one of the RCAF's nine air vice-marshals, is the senior citizen in point of service at this headquarters of Allied Air Forces Central Europe, main NATO air arm.

Since July, he's been temporary assistant senior citizen in rank, as well.

The University of British Columbia graduate was elevated to acting chief of staff when Air Chief Marshal Sir Basil Embury of the RAF took over AAFCE's command from U.S. General Lauris Norstad.

He is well known here and his mother, Mrs. Laura Plant, lives at 194 Olive.

At 43, his worth as a planner, organizer and elder statesman is indicated by his position as the highest-ranking Canadian officer on the continent and one of the most respected voices in NATO council.

It's a position that fits in well with Canada's NATO contribution of four Sabre jet fighter wings, now nearly completed and providing a big portion of the modern fighter power available.

Plant has earned his position by hard slugging as head of the logistics or supply planning department, where he's faced the difficulties of supplying NATO air bases of six nations.

He took the job two years ago

AIR VICE-MARSHAL PLANT

as one of six assistant chiefs of staff. Since then, he's risen further and faster than any other high-ranking NATO officer.

KNOWS PROBLEMS

His grasp of NATO's all-important integration problem was illustrated at the conference on logistics he called early in the game. High staff officers from the nations concerned had barely settled in their chairs when Plant told them abruptly that the time had come to consider "whether we are going to have a truly Allied air force or six little ones with all the separate logistics complications that implies."

When Norstad reorganized AAFCE, he made Plant one of his three deputies, impressed by his drive and potential. New emphasis was laid on the importance of the logistics department.

The veteran RCAF officer comes well by his administrative ability, much of which was groomed in the years prior to 1939 in a variety of flying, training and administrative posts.

Totem Players' 'Jane Steps Out' Tale of High-Stepping Man Hunt

BY MAURY GWYNNE

A high-stepping man-hunter will bring smiles and chuckles to Totem Theatre audiences this week in the fast-moving comedy, "Jane Steps Out."

Right on the tail of the mystery thriller, "Night Must Fall," this comedy will be a cap story about an innocent young thing who sets out to steal her sister's fiancé.

ENGLISH AUTHOR

Written by the English playwright, Kenneth Horne, "Jane Steps Out," has been called one of the fastest-paced comedies ever written.

Jane, played by Norma Macmillan, is a gay assortment of ugly duckling, vamp, woman of the world and anything else she can concoct to win the admiration of her sister's man.

The man in question finds Jane a deeper problem than the Egyptian tombs where he spends his time in exploration.

To round out the farcical cast in this hilarious story, Jane's mother is a golf-loving extrovert, her father a blustering former army officer and her grandmother a pipe-smoking old schemer who plots Jane's campaign against her sister.

Playing a guest role is Mildred Franklin who portrays a dreadfully posh, monocle-wearing young lady with very set ideas.

On stage will be Jack Droy and Daphne Goldrick, both in "Night Must Fall," Murial Ontkian, Kitty Dutcher, and playing opposite Norma Macmillan in the lead role, Thor Argirum as the bewildered young man.

This nonsensical story should be good entertainment for the whole family.

Maurice Corbett, whom Victoria theatregoers will remember as a member of the York cast, said Friday he has sold another play to an American publishing house.

Titled "Lucky Dollars," it is a three-act comedy about a man who wins a sweepstake and takes on a bet that he can keep the news quiet for a whole year.

BOUGHT BY COMPANY

Mr. Corbett said the Row-Peterson Plays Limited in Evanston, Illinois, made the purchase.

One of Maurice Corbett's plays, "A Lady Called X," appeared on the York stage last spring.

Victoria baritone John Dunbar will be heard in an afternoon broadcast from the CBC this week.

Mr. Dunbar will sing a special program on Tuesday afternoon from 2:15 to 2:30, the CBC has announced.

When the Shakespearean Festival at Stratford closed in August, the cast presented Montreal actress Eleanor Stuart with the gown she wore as the Countess Rousillon in "All's Well That Ends Well."

The veteran actress, who has played many leading roles in English and American theatrical productions, was given the gown as a mark of appreciation for the help she gave cast members in voice and dramatic training.

The Ford Theatre comes back to the air on the Dominion Network of the CBC on October 2.

The hour-long program has won many awards for the fine quality of show and cast it has produced and has given many young Canadian actors their first chance at professional work.

CANADIANS FARE WELL. Canadian playwrights have also fared well with this program and the practice of using all Canadian material will continue as far as possible, CBC officials have announced.

More than 1,600 youngsters from Canada and the United States attended the eight-week course at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Michigan, this summer.

Most of them took part in some phase of the camp's six orchestras, three bands and many ensemble and choral groups.

Of all the Canadians who have made a spot for themselves in the British Isles in show business, Ontario-born contains the music of Brahms, Jack Billings is probably the Wolf, Strauss, Radeke, Humperdinck and Schubert.

Billings, a dancer director actor wants nothing more than to come home to Canada, but he is so well established in London theatre and television circles nobody will let him go.

... it's the poor man's "Butcherts"

Heinrich Schlusnus

Hello September, & how are you. Just what's to come, I haven't a clue. A Rui so far Sept., you're doing fine. Your sun & stars continue to shine.

To make my dahlias bulge such a size, I'm sure, if I could, I'd win first prize.

Put out under a gold label, the four volume work is called simply "Schlusnus Sings," and

I listen to people make odd whistling sounds, "I'll bet," said one, "that weighs 50 pounds."

"Just LOOK at this thing," said a passer-by. To hold up it's head, it surely did try.

It seems such a shame, it has to droop. There's a horticulturist here, & he's sure not a scoundrel.

They can't hardly see me, as I gaze in my chair. "Great Heavens!" exclaimed an elderly pair.

"What's he put in the soil, MUST be fish-gut. Or maybe he knows that writer 'Chetnut'."

Who knows about flowers, & what makes them rare. He now tills the soils, when he used to tell air. (CIVIL)

"WHAT a gorgeous color," another one cried. This russet-rose, with a hauser he's tied.

But a hauser my friends is not a strong stuff. So come, drive by, and see my stuff.

Bring me some chains, or cable of wire. But hurry up, before they all tire.

I'll saw you off one, before they are thru. And I'll throw in some earwigs, A BUSHEL OR TWO.
